DEAD LEAVES.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY ELSIE MAY.

Where the pearl white lilies quiver and pale roses grow,
Where the shadows in the river flutter to and fro,
Dead leaves lie amid the blossoms, though the fairy breeze
Floats in rare midsummer dances through the emerald trees.

There are forest boughs that never were by sunlight riven,
Like hearts 'reft of life and beauty shut from hope of heaven;
But beneath the depth and denseness of their covert lone,
Wild winds heap and drift the dead leaves with a shuddering moan.

So, far down within our spirits, when some dream is there,
Soothing every quivering heart-nerve to forget its care,
Gentlest breeze of casting fancy or grief's rushing blast
Suddenly must whirl before us memories of the past;

With their olden beauty withered and their freshness lost,
Like the sere and blighted leaflets on the wild winds tossed;
Spring unto the russet forest may bring back the bloom,
But the dead leaves 'neath our footsteps start not from the tomb.

So our life's fair outer branches may be fresh and bright,
While within the mold beneath them our hopes sleep in night,
Evermore in saddened memories must the spirit thrill,
While those hopes, like blighted leaflets, in our hearts lie still.

SHOOTING EXPEDITION TO WEST FALKLANDS.

Arriving at the town of Stanley, in the Falkland Islands, our ship was to remain a few days to have some slight repairs made to her, as well as to ship more provisions. In the interim six of us had made up our minds to form a shooting party, and, jumping on board a small vessel lent us for the occasion, we steered for the West Falklands. After encountering a few gales off those wild islands we took a course well known to our skipper, who was one of our party, among the numerous isles and islets grouped round the larger Falkland. We dropped anchor in a snug cove, where we intended leaving the vessel, while we lowered a boat and pulled up a small creek and effected a good landing. With our guns, plenty of ammunition and a stock of provisions, we climbed a rock close to the shore, whence we could look about us and get a good survey of the island. It was of considerab e size. We saw that we should have no little difficulty in penetrating across it, through the high tussac grass which almost entirely covered the ground. We first advanced together. Instead of going directly inland we made our way along the shore among the penguin grass. This grows to the height of ten feet, on the tops of clumps of decayed vegetable matter, forming large hillocks, which gave an appearance to the shore as if it had been covered with a coppice of underwood. We took our way through it, often being hid from each other by the high grass, and had not gone far when a loud roar saluted our ears. Myself and our second mate were together, but we had lost sight of the rest of the party. Instinctively I drew back a few paces, and my companion, not being one of the "best of shots," looked inclined to make a run of it. Seeing his uneasiness, I gave him the encouraging "Keep firm, man!" Our guns were loaded with small shot, so that we could hope to make but little impression on the body of a wild animal. The roar was repeated and there was a loud rustling among the penguin grass on a mound near us. The grass moved rapidly. We looked in that direction. Presently the huge head of a ferocious looking animal appeared, glaring at us from among the grass. It turned out to be a sea lion. Retiring a few yards we drew the small shot from our guns and reloaded them with ball. Advancing to within twenty paces of the beast, I lodged a ball in its head; the next moment he rolled over, roaring more lustily than ever, when my companion, leveling his piece, fired, giving him the finishing touch. He was a fine specimen of the seal kind, measuring eight feet long, and with a mane covering his neck and shoulders. His color was of a yellowish brown. Going on, we reached a lake of no small dimensions, from which large numbers of teal got up. We found some good sport here, bagging twenty head of birds of various descriptions in an hour. I had left my gun charged with bird shot, while my friend loaded his with ball, saying he thought we should not be likely to meet with more birds for some time to come, after the havoc we had made amongst them.

We had not proceeded far when I espied, through an opening in the high grass, the head of a huge bull, not fifty yards from us, and, as it seemed, fast asleep. To reload the second gun was the work of a very few minutes. While this was going on we fancied we heard the sound of voices proceeding from our party, but to call out to them we dare not, for it would be an act of great indiscretion, inasmuch as by so doing we should more than probably disturb the monster from his slumbers. Our guns being in readiness, like the North American Indians on a war trail, we crawled stealthily towards him. Having previously told my companion I would give the word "fire" as a signal, that we might fire simultaneously, after we had got ourselves into a good position we halted, and, resting our guns on a bank, "bang! bang!" went the reports from both pieces. It is true we did not fire together, but both bullets struck the brute, mine entering just behind the ear. To our great surprise the bull never moved. Re-loading our pieces, we thought to get closer to the monster, when we found our further progress impeded by the bogginess of the ground. At last we were brought to a stand-still, about ten paces from our victim, from the softness of the soil. Taking a disappointed glance at each other we burst out into a fit of laughter. The bull had evidently got into a bog in wet weather, and in struggling to free himself had died of starvation. His head was stretched out, as if hopelessly longing for the rich food that was only thirty paces from where he died. All round the morass were the hoof marks of his comrades, as if they had been watching him in his dying struggles.

A little further on we came to a smaller lake, which was swarming with birds, geese, ducks, divers and other wild fowl. Among them were several large and beautiful white swans, with black necks, which swam about with the greatest unconcern. To have shot the swans would have been folly, for had we killed them we could not get at them, they being in the middle of the lake, so we contented ourselves with killing a few ducks and several divers. We had now got a pretty good load of game for our trouble, and setting down by the side of the lake, we opened our wallets to take some refreshment, hoping that in the meantime our companions would come up to us. Our repast being over, and no one putting in an appearance, we began to feel some uneasiness as to their safety. Not daring to stay at this place longer, we made a forward movement. We had walked on a mile or so, wondering all the time which way the rest of our party had taken, when we were surprised at hearing a tremendous roaring noise, apparently not far away. It was a different sound from that of the sea lion, and we soon recognized it as the voice of an angry bull. Again the bull bellowed, and this time several others lent their voices to the terror inspiring chorus. We got on the top of the highest mound near us, and from thence we made out five or six bulls, with their tails erect, and making towards us. The spot on which we stood afforded us no protection, and the rock we were too much against us, with only two gunsy but a couple o hundred yards from us was a steep rock, just rising above the grass, and our only chance of safety was to climb it. No time was to be lost. In making our way to the rock we found it necessary to drop our game and the wallets, for we could see that if we were successful in reaching it we could not get to the top before our enemies came up to us. Onward we ran, and on came the bulls; we were still a dozen yards from the rock, the bulls in close attendance upon us, tearing up the grass in their fury. My companion lost a little way in stumbling over a tuft of grass, but soon recovered himself. On ward I sprang, hoping to make a good bound up the rock, but was disappointed, for the face of the rock was too perpendicular directly in front to allow me to get up it, but a little to the right it became easier of ascent. I scrambled up, and had just time to lay myself at full length when one of the bulls made a full butt at my friend as I was helping him up. The horns of the beast passed between his feet. In his hurry he let drop his gun at the bottom of the rock. The bull vented his rage by giving it several butts as it lay on the ground. It was a miracle that the piece did not go off—had such been the case some fun might have been witnessed at the brute's astonishment. The other bulls had now come up, with their tails in the air, bellowing at the top of their voices, tearing the ground up on all sides, and tossing the grass over their heads. We had seven bulls to contend with, which was enough to try the nerves of a "Gordon Cummings," independent of two sea-faring men, like us. On examination of our pockets we could only muster five bullets between us. Thus, supposing every bullet to have had in this case its billet, and to have mortally wounded an animal, that would leave two unprovided for, and even with two we had no desire to contend on level ground. Still we determined to do what we could; so I took a steady aim at the beast which had led on the attack. The bullet struck him on the head; but his skull was too thick and though it wounded him severely, it did not penetrate his brain. In his agony he tore up the ground most unmercifully, and bellowed louder than before. My companion now took the gun and fired, but with no success, for the ball struck the beast in the shoulder, which did not add to the sweetness of his temper. We had now but three bullets left, and all our enemies as vicious as ever. We agreed that the most important thing to be done was to get rid of the leader, who seemed to give us most trouble, and taking the loaded piece again, I waited for him. Upon the receipt of his last wound he made a charge round the rock, apparently looking for something where with to vent his anger upon. Presently he came round again to where we were standing, and taking a steady aim, by resting my elbow on my knee, I fired. He received a mortal wound. Roaring with fury, he bounded along towards the rock. Suddenly he stopped—down went his head, and over he rolled, close under the rock, where he died. The other six bulls, no way daunted at the death of their leader, continued raging about as furious as ever. We had now but two bullets left, and with those we could scarcely hope to settle one of them. We sat ourselves down, watching our enemies, hoping they would grow tired of waiting for us, and go away, but they appeared no way disposed to do so. Never did a beleaguering army watch more pertinaciously round a hard pressed garrison than did our formidable enemies watch for our descent from the rock. In vain we stood up and looked around on every side for the rest of our party, as far as our somewhat limited range of vision extended. There was not a sign of them to be seen. As we had taken but a light luncheon, we began to feel very hungry and to cast longing glances at our wallets, and the gun which lay at some distance from the rock, but which we dared not attempt to get. Not ten feet below where we sat was the bull. Dancying we should like a steak from his carcase, we waited until a favorable opportunity presented itself. In the interim we began to collect the moss and dried grass that was to be found on the rock, wherewith to cook it with if we were lucky in our anticipations. In a short time we had collected sufficient fuel to roast the whole carcase, were it necessary. As we expected, the bulls got tired first, and, lowering their tails, commenced grazing. We more than once thanked our lucky stars that we had not got carnivorous animals to deal with. Having waited till the bulls got far enough away I descended on to the carcase, when, having previously sharpened my knife, I cut four or five fine steaks. Handing them up to my companion, I became brave from impunity and went on further and picked the gun up, which we had been so much in need of. To our great satisfaction it was but little the worse for the butting it had sustained. Finding the bulls were getting further from us, I ventured to go and fetch the game and wallets.

Taking a loaded gun with me, I stealthily made up to the place where they lay, and, seizing them, made the best of my way towards the rock again. I had got about half way back, having used the utmost caution, when, thinking I was all safe, I suddenly shouted and laughed to my companion at my success. The shouting was enough. On came the bulls. I had just time to reach the rock and throw up the wallets, &c., when up came the leading bull, about fifty yards in front of the others. Seeing I could not climb the rock in time to get out of his way, I made a deliberate stand, trusting to fortune for the consequences. On he came; I raised the gun, and, taking aim at his forehead, pulled the trigger. The ball entered his right eye. Down went his head, tearing the ground in all directions. He rushed on almost close to where I stood, and then, as if making a voluntary somersault, rolled over, writhing in the greatest of agony. While I was getting up on the rock my companion gave him a bullet which settled him. We now left the others to do as they pleased while we lighted a fire. When once the fire was lighted, we put the teal under the embers, and, sportsmanlike, cooked our steaks upon the ends of our ramrods. Having rum, water, biscuits, &c., in our wallets, we had every reason to be satisfied with our repast.

Now that the meal was over, we began to think more seriously of the awkwardness of our position. We were just contemplating what was best to be done, when one of the bulls made a rush towards the rock; at the same time my companion laid hold of a bunch of blazing grass and threw it at his head. The flaming mass caught on the bull's horns, which had the effect of making him turn tail and rush bellowing off from the rock. But at the same time it had another effect, and a most disastrous one, which we had not contemplated. Galloping on, the brute very soon ireed himself from his burning head dress by sending it into some tussac grass. In a moment the dry grass ignited and, fanned by the breeze, soon ran along the ground at a furious pace. On it went, halting occasionally to play round some tall clump, out of which directly afterwards forked flames darted forth and quickly reduced it to ashes, while thick volumes of smoke curled upwards to the sky. No sooner did the bulls smell the smoke than up went their tails and with loud bellows they dashed through the grass like mad things. This was the first time we had a chance of escape. Following the impulse of the moment, we seized our guns, game, etc., and, clearing the rock, took an opposite direction to the one our enemies had taken. We had not had bad sport, after all said and done. We had killed two bulls and any amount of small "game," wild fowl, etc. We will say nothing about the "dead bull" we shot. While making for the creek we were congratulating ourselves upon the day's sport, when my companion seized me by the arm and we came to a stand still, looking with dismay at the scene before us. The flames, blown by the wind, had caught the neighboring clumps of tall grass. Dry as it could well be, it blazed up furiously. Our further progress was completely barred by the fierce flames which were rapidly extending on every side, and even then running along the ground towards us. We had already passed over a quantity of dry grass, which in another moment might be on fire, and then all hope of escape would be at an end. Back we ran to the rock as the only place of safety, the fierce flames, like hissing serpents, close to our heels. Hotter and hotter became the air, more dense and suffocating the smoke.

Blinded and confused by it, we could scarcely find our way. On either side the flames were leaping upwards round the tall tufts of dry grass. The rock was once more reached, but with difficulty we ascended it, for the smoke was stifling in its extreme. In a few moments the rock was surrounded with flames; leaping, tossing hissing, and, together with the wind, made the rock nearly as hot as a furnace. All this time we lay with our faces in our wallets that we might not inhale more smoke than we possibly could help, and expecting every moment that the flames would reach us. We chose the centre of the top of the rock, that we might be farther away from the flames, but nevertheless the heat was very painful to bear. At last the flames subsided. Thanks, there were no trees near, or the consequences might have been fatal. We expected nothing less than to have been roasted alive. Notwithstanding the flames had ceased near the rock, the smoke was still very bad, and it was a long time before we could leave it. Night was setting in apace, when we left the scene of our captivity to return to the boat. Our companions, who had got tired of waiting for us, had just rowed from the shore, when one of their party suddenly caught sight of us by the aid of the moon, when they put back again, and we were soon on board our vessel. Many a peal of laughter rang through our cabin at our expense whenever I related the adventures of our shooting expedition in the West Falklands. [GLYN'S TRAVELS.

NOVEMBER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

O, comfortless, cold November!
O, chilly and dreary rain!
O summer air and pleasant skies,
How long 'ere you come again?

O, spring, with your balmy breezes,
And O ye summer flowers—
Till you come again I shall count and speed
Thy wearily passing hours.

O, pitiless, dread November—
O last of the months of fall—
I have hated you bitterly always,
And this one most of all;

For, six months since, in an evil
Moment and frame of mind,
To a little obligation
My name, in full, I signed.

And, O pitiless, dread November,
As I have already said,
Before three o'clock on the twenty-sixth
That little note must be paid!

TALK ABOUT DOGS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

I want to jot down a few thoughts upon and a few anecdotes of dogs. It is a very prolific and varied theme, involving humor and hydrophobia; the one marked and peculiar, the other inexpressibly terrible alike to the eye and the imagination. Let me briefly advert to the last first.

Every once in a while you will see going the rounds of the newspapers all over the country a paragraph headed:—"A Cure for the Hydrophobia." In one case, recorded in various parts of the southern states, it is the "mad stone," as it is called—a softish, porous bit of purple-tinted slate—which being applied to the bite absorbs the poison that it imparted. It is asserted on various southern authority, that persons who have been bitten by a rabid dog have travelled thirty miles on foot to have the stone applied to their wounds, and in almost every instance with entire success. But in every such case that I have seen recorded the "mad dog" was previously killed before he was proved to have been rabid, and before the cure for his fatal bite had been applied.

There seems to be much misconception of the true characteristics of a mad dog. It has been found to be a very great error to suppose that a rabid dog always shows aversion to water, as the name of the disease implies. On the contrary, he will sometimes leap at it and imbibe it, or swim across a mill pond or narrow river without manifesting any of the horror which marks the disease in man. I once saw a big, handsome Newfoundland dog shot dead a quarter of a mile out in the Hudson river, who had bitten a fine little boy on the right leg the day before. He was as "mad as a March hare," and if his bite, instead of only bruising a large black and blue spot on the little fellow's limb, had penetrated the skin and sent the virus into the circulation of the blood, there was not the slightest doubt in the mind of the physician who was called to attend him that he would have fallen a victim to hydrophobia.

The most sure symptom of madness in a dog is a complete alteration of temper from the mild and familiar to the sullen and the snarling; he snaps at all objects, animate and inanimate, and violently gnaws them. Even in this state his behavior often continues unaltered to his master or mistress, and hence the cases which have arisen from having been licked by the tongue of such a dog on some part of the face or hands where the skin had been broken. Though he goes wildly about, apparently without an object, foaming at the mouth generally, and snapping as he proceeds, he rarely gallops, but mostly keeps to a sullen trot, with his head down.

The change of a human being writhing under hydrophobia is a scene never to be forgotten by those who have had the misfortune to witness it. I once heard "Colonel Snow," the well remembered temperance convert and lecturer, describe the terrible effect of the malady upon two of his children, who died with it in this city. There lay the little victims, under a certain sentence of death—death the most dreadful—their unsteady, glistening eyes wandering over the anxious faces that surrounded them, the presence of any liquid, the noise of pouring it out, a polished surface or anything suggesting the idea of it, even the sudden admission of a cool current of air, bringing on the most agonizing paroxysms of spasm in the throat. To see them try to make the rebel muscles obedient to see and hear them "struggle with the demon fiends," and sit up and say that "they will take the medicine." And then they are apparently in a moment calm. The attendant approaches with the cup, the eldest little boy receives it, lifts it to his parched lips, his haggard eye rolls, the rising spasms overpower him, "I can't!" he faintly utters, and falls back in agony. I dare not go on, it is too horrible!

Let the symptoms of madness in dogs, hereinbefore cited, save innocent four-footed favorites from "*mis*fit decited, save innocent four-footed favorites from "*mis*fit decited, save innocent four-footed favorites from "*mis*fit dec

To Correspondents.

F. B. B.—We can best answer your question by quoting Section 225 of an act of this state, governing militia organizations, passed April 26, 1866:—"For the purpose of collecting such fines as may be imposed by any court martial authorized by said act, the president of the court shall, within thirty days after the fines have been imposed, make a list of all the persons fined, designating the company to which they respectively belong, and the sums imposed as fines on each person, and shall draw his warrant, under his hand and seal, directed to any marshal, sheriff or constable of any city or county, as the case may be, thereby commanding him to levy such fine or fines, together with the costs, of the goods and chattels of such delinquents. No property shall be exempt from the payment of such fines, and in default of sufficient goods and chattels with which to satisfy the same, then to take the body of such delinquent and convey him to the common jail of such city or county." Issues growing out of this would, of course, be governed by the ruling of the court before which the case might be brought.

TOM AND BILL.—1. Billy Emerson compares favorably with the best in the business. 2. Not to our knowledge. 3. We fear that it will not be a capital success. 4. Tony cannot marry that lady, as she is the wife of another. 5. The phrase originated with Jim Fisk, Jr. 6. William is looked upon as fair to middling in this vicinity. 7. Ed. James may be able to get you what you want in that line.

AMATEUR, Chicago.—The refusal of one player to discharge his duties in the field is not enough to warrant the umpire in giving the game to the opposite party by a score of 9 to 0. The nine as a whole, or through their captain, must refuse in order to legalize a forfeiture. The Mutuals would have done better to have put in another man to pitch and played with eight men.

M. B., New Orleans, La.—1. We have not heard of the whereabouts of the lady for a long time. There was a rumor that she died in your city in 1867. 2. It is very uncertain if the John Thompson Troupe will visit your city this season. 3. Harry Beckett and Eliza Weathersby have rejoined the troupe. 4. They can command as good terms as the parties you refer to.

L. N., Wilmington, Del.—Suppose A bets B fifty dollars, the money is put up into D's hands as stakeholder; who does the money belong to pending the decision of the bet? Does the stake each man put up belong to them respectively until the bet is decided by D?".....The money belongs to the man who put it up, subject to the conditions of the contract.

G. B., Philadelphia.—The challengers have a right to name day and place, but it does not follow that the challenged party are obliged to accept. The latter can refuse and name date and place themselves. The custom, however, is to play the first game on the challenging club's grounds, and the return on the challenged club's field.

CONSTANT READER, Philadelphia.—Jim Mace and Joe Coburn were to have fought at Piercetown, Parish of Kilmara, County Tipperary, Ireland, for £1,000, figure wedding £500 for each, on the 5th Oct. 1866. Coburn appeared in the ring, but Mace left Ireland for England the night previous, owing to the non-agreement upon a referee. The stakes were afterwards drawn.

H. J. M., South Boston, Mass.—Mace and Sayers were twice matched, the latter forfeiting a "fiver" once and being allowed to draw his deposit in the other instance. 2. A's high, low, scores before B's Jack; consequently, A wins, no matter how the cards were played.

W. H. M.—"How will bets be decided in the game played in Chicago between the White Stockings and the Mutuals? The game was called at the end of the eighth innings, and declared in favor of the White Stockings by a score of 10 to 5".....All bets hold good, the game having been legally terminated.

W. H. L., Petroleum Centre, Pa.—If A played against B and C as partners, then B and C should have followed each other in their turn at the innings; if, however, it was each man for himself, then the turn at the cue should have been determined by "banking" or by mutual agreement.

C. B., Parker's Landing.—Yankee Sullivan beat Bob Caunt, a brother of "Ould Ben," near Harper's Ferry, Va., May 11th, 1847. He did not come to this country expressly to fight Sullivan, however.

THEATRICAL, San Francisco, Cal.—1. It is a programme distributed in the theatre. Address its proprietor, No. 39 Vesey street, this city. 2. There are several. 3. Nel her Jefferson nor Booth have as yet positively decided to visit California.

YOUR UNCLE, Honesdale, Pa.—1. Write to W. C. Wemyss, No. 3 Astor Place. 2. The blocks are put together first, so as to fit them properly, and after the drawing is made the pieces are then separated and given to various engravers where small portions are worked on.

J. H. M., St. Louis, Mo.—1. The highest run at billiards that Rudolphe has made is 312. 2. Members of a stock company are generally expected to furnish their own wardrobe, the cases to the contrary being very rare.

A. L. M., Chelsea.—1. A player who is assisted cannot call for his partner's best, and play alone, in euchre. 2. The player who made the trump had the right to play alone, but the other had not; the three tricks taken by the latter count him two points for the euchre.

T. B., Baltimore.—The backer of Stamps in her match against Narragansett, at Baltimore, wins the money. All bets on that race were play or pay, unless specially agreed upon at the time of making the bet.

BELLEVUE, Montreal, C. E.—The referee having decided it a dead heat and ordered the men to run again, the man refusing to obey said order, whether for that or any one following, forfeits the match, provided his opponent goes over the course in the designated time.

HARVESTER.—1. The same idea was worked up for us some time ago, so that yours would not be interesting now. 2. They are working together.

CALUMET, Chicago.—1. The umpire not only has the right, but he is obliged to do so by the rules. 2. There are no base hits credited in forfeited games. 3. Bets go with the ball in this case.

UNION.—Your idea is not enough, for you have not broken Dutch Is not kept up to the standard throughout, which detracts from the merit of the burlesque.

L. M.—Loyalty is not subject to the same laws as common mortals. She did not change her name when married. Guelph is the family name.

DUMBLEBIGBOOZHO, Maysville, Ky.—1. A should deal in order that B should not lose his beg. 2. There are 13 printed rules for the game of Cassino.

H. C. F., Buffalo.—D having played and taken the trick, B's revoke is complete, which adds two points to the score of the adversary.

BOOKWALTER, Laurenceburgh, Ind.—1. Address one of the dramatic agents in this city. 2. No. 28 Maiden lane. 3. Just what the term implies—a little of everything.

C. W. H., Cleveland, O.—Your letters were never received. The lady you refer to is not a resident of St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., nor did she make her first appearance at the place you name.

CHAPARRAL, San Francisco, Cal.—Charles Ingersoll is traveling with his circus in South America, but his precise location we cannot give you.

N. N., Denver, Col.—Your letter arrived too late for publication; and, failing to reach here by the Saturday of each week. Items will be acceptable.

A. J. M., Philadelphia.—We have no other reply to make; it is a mere matter of opinion, and your judgment may be just as good as our own.

W. H.—The fastest even mile on record in England is 1:44, by Cossack, in 1847. Gladiateur ran 1 mile and 17 yards in 1:39, at Newmarket, in 1865.

GEO., Milford, O.—1. Poole whipped Morrissey in their rough and tumble fight on Amos street dock in 1854. 2. Hyer and Poole never fought each other.

CHICAGO.—The Atlantics played but one game with the Reds in 1869. They declined another trial. The score was 32 to 10 in favor of the Reds. F. loses.

C. F. P., Chicago.—You ask a singular question. You lose, of course. How could the Chicagos beat the Mutuals 9 runs when the score stood 7 to 5?

BOARD OF TRADE, Chicago.—As the bet was made on the ninth innings, which was not played, the bet is off. Of course the action of the Mutual pitcher prevented the bet being settled.

AGRA, St. Louis.—1. You are acknowledged as such. 2. Send address and the paper will be forwarded regularly. 3. The same combination will be allowed to you as we give to agents.

SCORER, Chicago.—Include only professional clubs. The list you send is a fair one for averages. Make your average from number of strikes, not games, and on first base hits, not outs and runs.

READER, Lawrence.—Order Dinks, Mayhew & Hutchinson on "The Dog," of your bookseller. It is published by Townsend & Adams, New York.

SUBSCRIBER, Augusta.—The horse is not eligible to trot for the prize, for he has won a prize worth $300. Although it was not paid in money, yet it was money's worth.

J. J. K.—Order McClure & Harvey's American edition of Stonehenge on the Horse. It is published by Townsend & Adams, Broome street, New York.

MANY SUBSCRIBERS, Corry, Pa.—There is no recorded official time in England or Ireland. Faster time in racing has been made in England than in Ireland.

SUBSCRIBER, Woodstock, Ont.—The judges had no right or power to declare bets off, unless for fraud. The backer of F. F. Ellis loses the bet.

W. T. FERGUSON, Indianapolis.—1. Turner & Co., 808 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, publish a work on game fowl. 2. Ed. James, whose card is in another column, can furnish you with fowl.

H. J. B., Howland Flat.—1. That is more than we or any one else can tell. 2. Heenan weighed 196lbs. when he fought King. 3. Cannot state positively, as it was not given in the report.

J. H. C., Hobbs' Ranche, Cal. Tex.—We understand that he was mate on a steamer there, but whether first or second we cannot state. Address a letter to him.

GEO. L. T., Philadelphia.—Not arrived yet. We have no record of the best brick laying time on record.

JOE H., Philadelphia.—The man whose dog killed the given number of rats in 22 seconds wins. The fact of one of the opposing dog's five escaping does not affect the matter.

J. M., Kingston, Can.—The move which places the pieces in the king row ends there, and the adversary must then make a move.

SPORT, Canandaigua.—1. American Girl's best time is 2:19. 2. Lady Thorn's best time, 2:18¾, is the nearest to Dexter's. 3. A fair foul is a ball that strikes fair but rebounds into the foul ball field.

HIGLEY.—Poker is a show game, and the player holding three Jacks and two aces wins the money, that hand beating three sixes and two eights.

W. G. M., Moline, Ill.—1. The Alida made the fastest time from New York to Albany—in 6 hours 21 minutes. 2. Thomas Sharpley by Edwin Kelly.

E. F. E.—1. You had better join some good amateur society. 2. You can ascertain the names of the various societies by applying to the janitor of Dramatic Hall, in East Houston street.

H. F. G., Lowell, Mass.—Apply in person to the manager of some troupe, or put your affair in the hands of some one of the dramatic agencies.

PLUTO, Savannah, Ga.—Your letter received too late for use. We go to press Monday night. Mail letters so as to reach here on Saturdays or Monday mornings.

SUBSCRIBER, Millville, N. J.—Can't say how many, but the New Sunday Mercury is published weekly by R. McCurdy, No. 433 Broome street, this city.

CONNECTICUT BALL PLAYERS IN COUNCIL.

The annual convention of the Connecticut Association of Base Ball Players was held at Hartford on Wednesday, Nov. 2d, delegates being present from the following clubs: Arctic, of Hartford, J. P. Moran, James Burns; Central City, of West Meriden, Samuel Newman, Michael Burke; Charter Oak, Hartford, G. E. Hubbell, W. H. Hills; Essex, Essex, C. S. Hough, D. W. Pratt; Hutchings, Hartford, W. C. Hutchings, R. S. Tweed; Jefferson, Hartford, M. M. Coughlin, Bernard Birmingham; Mansfield, Middletown, W. Backliff, J. Putnam; New Britain, New Britain, Mr. J. B. Reynolds; Osceola, Stratford, C. Leslie Youngs; Trinity, Mr. J. B. Reynolds; Osceola, Stratford, C. Leslie Youngs; Trinity, Hartford, G. C. Burgwin, J. G. Bedwitch; Yale, New Haven, C. Deming, H. R. Elliott. The following officers were elected for the year ensuing:—G. E. Hubbell, Charter Oak, president; A. Putnam, Mansfield, first vice president; D. Pratt, Essex, 2d vice president; W. H. Hills, Charter Oak, recording secretary; William Backliff, Mansfield, corresponding secretary; James Burns, Arctic, treasurer; delegates to the national association, G. E. Hubbell, A. Putnam. It was voted that the Mansfield Club, of Middletown, be recognized as the present champion club of the state. The following vote was offered by the Yale Club, and passed unanimously:—"Voted that no college club be allowed to play for the state championship." It was voted that the next convention be held at New Haven. The President announced the following committees:—

On Rules.—C. Leslie Youngs, Osceola, Stamford, chairman; J. B. Reynolds, New Britain, New Britain; C. Deming, Yale, New Haven.

On Resolutions.—A. Putnam, Mansfield, Middletown, chairman; J. G. Bedwitch, Trinity, Hartford; Samuel Newman, Central City, West Meriden.

On Judiciary.—C. L. Hough, Essex, chairman; W. C. Hutchings, Hutchings, Hartford; F. J. Moran, Arctic, Hartford; H. R. Elliott, Yale, New Haven; W. H. Hills, Charter Oak, Hartford.

The thanks of the Association were tendered to G. E. Hubbell for his efficient aid to the base ball interests of the state.

THE MUTUAL AND WHITE STOCKING MATCH.—The betting fraternity—judging from the number of questions sent us—seem to be in doubt as to how bets stand in regard to the result of the recent game in Chicago between the Mutuals and White Stockings; but an examination into the matter solves all doubts as to the question of the legal victory of the White Stockings by a score of 7 to 5. That is a legal victory as far as the actual decision of the umpire is concerned, without bringing into question the accuracy or impartiality of that decision. In base ball there is no appeal from the decision of the umpire except through the medium of one or other of the judiciary committees known as the National Association; consequently, all bets go by the decision of the umpire, right or wrong, and in this instance the decision was that the Whites won by a score of 7 to 5, the figures at the close of the 8th innings. But by the statement of our correspondent, as well as by the comments of the Chicago papers, it appears that Capt. Mills withdrew his men off the field, instead of Wolters standing alone as the only man refusing to play. If this was so, then it became the duty of the umpire to decide the game as forfeited by a score of 9 to 0, in which case bets would have been off. It would appear, however, that the decision was given as recorded. This places Mr. Foley in a rather bad position, irrespective of the evidence afforded by the record of bases given on called balls.

ON THE HALF SHELL.—On Oct. 18th the Bonnie Blues, of Montgomery, Ala., were scooped by the Olympians, of West Point, Ga., at Columbus, the score standing 74 to 30. On the day following the Montgomery County nine were to have met the O's, but the latter failed to show up and the M. Cs. accordingly were awarded the game by a score of 9 to 0. They played against a picked nine, however, and scored 85 to 19. This same club defeated the Sevilles, of Pensacola, on the 21st ult., counting 61 to 18, and on the day following took camp a picked nine composed of members of the Seville and Westcott clubs; score, 40 to 26.....The Tri-Mountains, of Boston, were victorious in a game with the Kearsarges, of Stoneham, Mass., played on Oct. 27th; 15 to 13 were the figures. .....The nines of Georgetown and Columbia College played a match at Georgetown, D. C., on the 3d inst., which the former won by a score of 50 to 24.....A game was contested at Fort Wayne, Ind., on Nov. 1st, between a nine whose aggregate weight was estimated at 2,000 lbs., and a nine of light weights, some of whom reached an altitude of over six feet. The fat 'uns scored 27 to 26. .....The Harndens, of Cincinnati, last week beat the Metropolitans, of the same burgh, 19 to 9.

WHITE STOCKINGS VS. THE MUTUALS AND REDS.—After the unsatisfactory game between the Mutuals and White Stockings in Chicago, a proposition was made by the former to play the latter in Cincinnati. This was accepted by the Whites, whereupon the Mutuals engaged the Red Stocking grounds for Friday, the 4th. This was done on Wednesday morning and a telegram to that effect was immediately sent to the Chicagoans. No reply was received till evening, and then it came in the shape of a proposition to the Mutuals to return to Chicago and play. The latter left for home forthwith. As the Reds found the Chicago nine were still in working order and ready to play, the following challenge was sent from them to the Whites by telegraph:—

CINCINNATI, NOV. 2, 1870.

TO TOM FOLEY, MANAGER, OR SECRETARY CHICAGO BASE BALL CLUB.—We challenge you to a series of games, practice or otherwise, the first to be played here on Nov. 7th, the second to be played in Chicago on Wednesday, Nov. 9th. W. P. NOBLE, Sec.

The reply to this, properly italicized, we take from the Cincinnati Commercial:—

CHICAGO, NOV. 3, 1870.

To W. P. NOBLE, SECRETARY CINCINNATI BASE BALL CLUB.—Will you play first game here on Monday, we to take all receipts. If we play you return game in Cincinnati Wednesday, you to take all receipts; the game to be practice, and not to affect the championship. If above is agreeable, will try and arrange it with our club. TOM FOLEY.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.—In reference to the lines quoted, viz.:—"That the White Stockings, having lost their first series with the Mutuals, must wait till next year for a match involving the championship," the Chicago papers say the absurdity of this statement will be manifest, when it is remembered that at the time when the Mutuals had won the first series they were not the champions, and that the White Stocking were the first club to be successful in the first game of a series involving the championship. The first series had no bearing upon this question, and the White Stockings are now universally recognized as the rightful possessors of the penant.

THE NATIONAL JUNIOR ASSOCIATION.—The annual Convention of the National Association of Junior Base Ball Players will be held at Tammany Hall, this city, on Wednesday, Nov. 16th, at 7.30 P. M. All junior clubs of good standing throughout the United States are eligible to membership, and will be gladly welcomed in this Association of lovers of base ball and non-professional players. Distant clubs, who cannot conveniently send delegates, may be admitted upon application and remittance of one year's dues and initiation fee, amounting to three dollars. Applications will be received and further information given by the corresponding secretary, S. W. Pearson, 33 North Second street, Troy, N. Y.

STAR VS. ATLANTIC.—These clubs will play their home and home game on Saturday, Nov. 12th, when the Stars will close play for the season. The Atlantics should close play with a match between their old and new nines. The former would include Pearce, Smith, P. O'Brien, Joe Oliver, Tice Hamilton, Price, Boerum and Webber, who can all get out to play.

JAMES WHITE, the famous catcher of the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, was to leave there for his home at Corning, N. Y., on the 6th, his "term of service" having expired. We believe he has not yet made an engagement for the season of 1871.

THE INDIANAPOLIS ball players are organizing a professional nine. First class players will be well treated and paid good salaries.

PEDESTRIANISM.

PEDESTRIAN SPORT IN CANADA.

Matters pedalistic are at present very lively in the neighborhood of Montreal, C. E. On Tuesday, Nov. 1st., a series of races came off upon the grounds of the Montreal Lacrosse Club, a good sized gathering witnessing them. The day was pleasant, but the track was heavy and slippery from recent rains, rendering fast time out of the question. At about 3.30 proceedings commenced with a half mile race between D. Hurtubise and Murphy (Scotsburg's unknown). Murphy led for three laps when Hurtubise got the office, and, cutting him down, won easily in 2:42¼, Murphy giving up. The next race was the mile dash between D. G. Macdonell, of Morrisburg, and J. H. Brindley, of Montreal, the latter being conceded 25 yards start. Betting on the day preceding was about even, Macdonell having the call, but on the grounds Brindley's partisans were slack and only one pool was sold at 7 to 4 on Macdonell. The two men looked confident. Macdonell was in perfect health and looked better than Brindley, who seemed suffering from cold or headache. Mr. F. umpired for Macdonell, and Mr. Hooban for Brindley, Melville Smith acting as referee, and John Lawlor as time-keeper. On getting away, both men went at it hard and the first lap ran even terms. Macdonell then began to close his gap, and on the fourth lap got up to Brindley. The pace then slackened sensibly, Macdonell trailing. On the seventh lap Brindley drew away a couple of yards and on the last the pace became a cracker, Macdonell making a good effort on the back-stretch, but Brindley, answering gamely, increased his lead, and, after a fine rally, landed himself a victory by 12 yards in 5:27¼. This race was well run from the start to finish, Brindley, despite insufficient preparation and illness, showing speed, strength and pluck. Macdonell made a serious error in not forcing the pace when on even terms with Brindley, especially as the latter was not in good health.

The next race was a dash, heats of 100 yards, for $50. The entries were M. Burgess, G. Broome, P. Sims and H. G. Young. Only one pool was sold, as follows:—Burgess, $5; Sims, $3; Broome, $1.50; Young, 25c. Burgess withdrew, announcing that he would give his $25 all the same. In the first heat Young and Sims made a good race till near the post, when Sims, running as if all abroad, managed to win by a yard. Time, 13¾ sec. In the second heat Sims got away after seven false starts, and, slipping his men as if they had been standing still, won by some fifty feet in 13¾ seconds. The winner is the fastest man we ever saw run in Montreal.

We understand that J. M. Walsh's challenge to run a man against any one in Montreal will be taken up by the friends of Keraronwe, to run 440 yards, straight, running start, for $250 a side. Brand and Boyle are matched to run a mile on even terms for $50. Brindley and Boyle are matched at two miles for $200.

FOUR MILE WALK.—In the neighborhood of five hundred people congregated at the Hackney Wick Grounds, London, Eng., on Oct. 18th to witness the match in which W. Howes, of Hoxton (Davidson's Novice), allowed W. Berry (alias Johnto), of Hackney half a minute start in a four mile walk, for £10 a side. W. Price started them, and Johnto in the time allowed gained 145 yards, but as soon as Howes was told to go he began to decrease the gap, and at the completion of the first mile had gained 10sec. on his opponent. Time, 7min. 50sec. At half-way he had got within 15sec. of his opponent, the time for that portion of the distance being—Johnto 15min. 40sec., Howes 25min. 25sec. Steadily the Hexton man decreased the distance between them, and on the completion of the third mile—time, 23min. 40sec.—he was only 45 yards in rear of his opponent. During the last mile, however, he began to exhibit symptoms of distress, and although he struggled on very gamely, Johnto ultimately won by 80 yards. Time, 31min. 51sec.

TEN MILE CHAMPIONSHIP OF SCOTLAND.—The match between W. Smith, of Paisley, and W. Parks, of Glasgow, to run ten miles for the championship and £30, came off at the Greenlide cricket grounds Oct. 8th. The afternoon was rather cold, nevertheless there was a large assemblage of spectators, and a most exciting race resulted. The men made their appearance upon the mark a little before 5, and they were dispatched at the second attempt, Smith being the first to lead, and ere a mile had been compassed he was 50 yards in advance. At the end of two miles he had placed another 150 yards to his credit, when Park made a game effort and succeeded in reducing the large gap between himself and Smith, so that at the end of the seventh mile 100 yards only separated them. After this Smith again forced the pace, and going gradually away, won by nearly 250 yards. Time, 57 min. 30 secs.

RICHARDS VS. ROBERTS.—The one hundred and fifty yards race between Thos. Richards, of Swinkastarre, and Wm. Roberts, of Kingston, is to be decided at the race course, Scranton, Pa., on Saturday next, Nov. 12th, both men to be on their marks at 2 o'clock, P. M., precisely.

M. SHEA, a well known lacrosse player and pedestrian, died suddenly on the 31st ult., at his residence, Montreal, C. E. His death is ascribed to over exertion in the 100 yards race at the athletic meeting a few days previous.

AQUATIC.

BROWN AND MEKEEL vs. COULTER AND JACKSON.

A SQUARE BACK DOWN.

The past week has developed something fresh regarding the proposed championship double and single scull matches, but we regret to state that an agreement has not been arrived at. Daniel Clark, of Boston, visited Pittsburgh on the 30th ult., in hopes of effecting a match or matches, and on the following day addressed a letter to Coulter, herewith given, also appointing a meeting for that afternoon at the Monongahela House.

HENRY COULTER.—SIR.—In view of the discussion concerning the matches made between yourself and Gordon Jackson on the one side, and Messrs. Brown and Mekeel on the other, and in view of the mooted question of superiority, I have visited Pittsburgh, especially to make a match, leaving, as you may see, the conditions entirely to yourself. Brown and Mekeel will row you a double scull race, and you may select any man you choose to go in the boat with you. We do not even limit you in the selection of a mate to Pittsburgh. You may choose your man from wherever you please. On the score of money we are ready to cover any amount, from $250 upwards, and with regard to distance you may also determine the length of the race. The day shall be of your own naming, and all that we require is two weeks' notice. Rough or smooth water you may determine upon as you think fit, and the weather is also left to your decision. We are satisfied with Mr. David Lewis, your own nominee, as referee, and ex-Mayor Blackmore as stakeholder. We will leave any deposit and will come here at our own expense. If you should prefer making a single scull race with Mr. Brown, we are ready to make it and on equally liberal terms. Very respectfully, DANIEL CLARK.

Notwithstanding the exceeding liberality of the terms offered in the foregoing card, however, neither Coulter nor any one to act in his behalf, appeared at the appointed place, and of course nothing could be done. Mr. Clark went so far as to offer $25 per week to Jackson to discontinue work and go into training with Coulter for a double scull race, but it was not accepted. Finding that it was impossible to make a match for such an event, he then made strenuous efforts to get on a match for a single scull race between Brown and Coulter, proposing to have it take place almost anywhere that the latter chose to select, but insisting upon a stake of $2,000 or $2,500 a side. All efforts were futile, however, and he took his departure for the Hub the same evening, not a little "huffed" at the turn affairs had taken. Considering the bombast in which Coulter has indulged since the opening of the season now at a close, this unmistakable double backdown is very creditable to him, and those who were disposed to credit him with being the man best entitled to the position of champion will now accord that honor to Walter Brown, who last won it in a race against this same oarsman.

REGATTA IN PORTLAND HARBOR.

The match between the crews of the West End and Emerald Boat Clubs, of Portland, Me., which came off on Nov. 2d, resulted in a victory for the former. This match was made since the Bowdoin Regatta, which took place on the 12th of Oct., in which both crews were entered, but owing to a foul, and the refusal of the Emeralds to start again the West End Boys pulled over the course and took the stakes. Not feeling satisfied, the Emeralds immediately challenged the West Ends to pull a four oar race in Portland harbor, for $100 a side. Their challenge was accepted, and the 2d of Nov. named as the day. There was considerable betting, the odds being decidedly in favor of the West End crew. The day turned out to be as fine as could be desired and the water was as smooth as glass. The course was from Portland Bridge down the harbor, a mile and one-half and return. At 10.15 A. M. both crews made their appearance, and at 10.25 the word "go" was given by the referee, Mr. Henry P. Wood. The West End Boys got away splendidly, pulling 42; the other crew splashed a little on the start, but soon settled down, pulling about 40. During the first mile the West Ends kept up their stroke, but gradually slacked down to 38, with the Emeralds some distance behind, pulling steadily. The West Ends kept pulling at this figure until within half a mile of home, when they put on steam and came over the line, pulling 45, making their time 19:23. The Emeralds followed in 21:10, pulling 42. The West End crew pulled six oars and the Emeralds four, the latter being allowed 36 secs., or six seconds per mile for each oar in excess. The names of the crews are given below:—

West Ends—Thomas Ball, stroke; T. O'Neil, M. L. O'Connor, J. C. Harvey, J. Shannon; J. Lovell, bow.

Emeralds—John O'Donnell, stroke; Wm. Logue, M. Davis, Edward Brady, bow.

A single scull race for the champion cup of Portland next took place. There were three entries, viz.:—English Blonde, rowed by Charles Davis; O'Connor Don, Mr. Davis; Orange Blossom, H. Ladd. The first named is a paper and the other two cedar shells. Distance two miles, turning a stake-boat one mile from starting point. They got off well, Davis taking the lead and keeping it, coming in in 13min. 10secs.; Ladd second in 13min. 24secs., and Perkins in 14min. Davis, however, turned the stake-boat the wrong way and was ruled out, but by mutual consent the race will be pulled over on Nov. 5th.

SINGLE SCULL RACE AT WORCESTER.

O'LEARY THE WINNER.

A match which for some time previous enlisted much attention among boating men in the Bay State was brought to a finale at Lake Quinsigamond on Thursday afternoon, the 3d inst. The principals were J. J. O'Leary, of Worcester, and J. A. Landers, of Lowell, and they rowed in shells over the lake course, which is short of three miles in length, for $250 a side. O'Leary weighed 168 lbs. and Landers lowered the scales at 138. There were collected at the lake something over a thousand men and boys, who were kept waiting from three o'clock until a quarter before five. The waiting was partly on account of the non-arrival of the expected referee from Boston, but it was finally decided that he would not come, so Mr. Charles B. Pratt was pressed into the service, and the trainers—Walter Brown and Thomas Butler—were asked to bring up their men. The judges, Daniel Downey at the lower stake and Joseph Midgely at the upper stake, for O'Leary, and Walter Brown at both points for Landers, expressed themselves as all ready, and the word was given, O'Leary having won the choice and taken the outside position. The men were given the word without any backing and filling, and got off, Landers a little the quickest. O'Leary soon came up, however, and at the end of the first half mile got the lead, which he kept, gaining gradually all the while. He turned the stake-boat considerably in advance, and led all the way down, coming in in 22:16, twenty-nine seconds ahead of Landers.

THE MISSISSIPPI STEAMBOAT RACE.

The late race on the big river has been quite an interesting topic of discussion 'way down south, and not a few bets have been lost and won on the time question. Therefore, for the satisfaction of those who have invested, and for the sake of the record, we here give the time table of the Princess' run in 1855, and Natchez and R. E. Lee in 1870:—

BLAKE AND DEELY.—A DRAW.—Thursday, Nov. 3d, had been set apart for the race between those noted amateurs of the Quick Club, Ed. Blake and Pat. B. Deely, a mile, in 17-foot boats, over the course of the Hudson A. R. Association, off Pleasant Valley, for a prize of the value of $500. The steamer chartered by the club for the accommodation of spectators had aboard a large number of persons when she left the Christopher street dock at 3 o'clock P. M., while others took passage for the scene on board the Fort Lee. At 4.15 the signal to start was given and the two boats sped forward through the water, but after pulling about a third of a mile Blake, who had obtained a slight lead, observed a snag directly in his course, in order to avoid which he pulled heavily on the left, the consequence of which was an accidental foul. They at once ceased rowing, but mutually agreed to start again. Accordingly they pulled back to the starting point and were again sent away nicely, Blake again secured a slight lead, after pulling a few strokes, and everything promised an exciting contest; but, unfortunately, shortly after leaving the spot where they first fouled in the rear, they collided once more. Blake at once stopped rowing and returned to the judges' boat, claiming foul, while Deely went over the course, completing the distance in 23:35. He likewise put in a claim of foul, and after hearing both sides of the question, the referee, Chas. B. Elliott, declared it a draw. Robt. Oulkin was judge for Blake, and John J. Eckerson for Deely.

THE ATLANTIC PENNANT REGATTA.—The contest between the sloop yachts Qui Vive and Daphne, for the champion pennant of the Atlantic Yacht Club, which was to have taken place on the 2d inst., but was postponed on account of bad weather, came off on the following day, when the wind came in strong, fitful blasts from the west, rendering the carrying of head sails out of the question. The course was the customary one—from a stake boat anchored off the Delaplaine House to and around the Southwest Spit and return. The vessels made a good start at about 11.45, and a fine race took took place down to the Spit, which the Qui Vive rounded less than two hundred yards in advance, these positions remaining unaltered when the outer bar buoy was passed. The wind had now shifted to W. N. W., and it became a difficult matter to keep the yachts right side up with care, it being exceedingly squally. The angry waters dashed over the vessels, drenching their occupants to the cuticle, which was by no means pleasant upon such a chilly day. After reaching Fort Hamilton the Qui Vive stood in shore, and being more sheltered than her opponent, rapidly increased her lead and came home about five minutes in the van. Time of the race, 2 hours and 58 minutes, the course being twenty-nine nautical miles long. The victor then proceeded to Glen Cove, there to go into winter quarters, with her honors thick upon her.

THE SAPPHO CHALLENGED BY THE TIDAL WAVE.—Of late considerable controversy has been going on between the owners of the yachts Tidal Wave and Sappho relative to their respective merits, and this has culminated in the former challenging the latter, in acceptance of an invitation so to do. Mr. Voorhis writes as follows:—

The Tidal Wave has been out of commission for about thirty days I will haul her out, however, and sail her against the Sappho twenty miles to windward and return, starting from Sandy Hook; both yachts to sail with their four lower sails, New York Yacht Club rules time allowance, each yacht to tack every fifteen minutes, for a prize cup the value of $500; Mr. Douglass to name the day and hour of the race, to be sailed within twenty days from date.

PEARON AND O'NEIL.—A dispatch from Troy states that the race between Thos. Pearon, of Yonkers, and James O'Neil, of Troy, came off there on Nov. 5th, and resulted in the former being declared victor upon a claim of foul, said foul occurring after they had pulled about an eighth of a mile. Pearon stopped rowing at once, while O'Neil went over the course, making the three miles in 28 minutes. Referee, C. F. Hill; Judges, G. A. Waters, of Troy, for O'Neil; C. Piepenbrink, of Albany, for Pearon.

SCULLING RACE IN CANADA.—Robert Berry, the colored champion of the New Dominion, and Thos. London pulled a two mile race at Toronto on the morning of the 24th ult., the former staking $100 to $75. A good start was effected, and they rowed nearly abreast until after rounding the mile stake-boat, when London went to the fore and won by about one hundred and fifty yards.

OCEAN YACHT CLUB.—The Jersey City Club held a meeting last week and elected the following officers:—Commodore, George E. Sherman, re-elected; Vice Commodore, Patrick Keenan; Rear Commodore, Charles Schmittner; Secretary, Benjamin Byron; Treasurer, John Newman; Measurer, John Keefe; Sailing Master, William Chesser.

AMHERST REGATTA.—A regatta between class crews of Amherst College, Mass., came off on the Connecticut river, near Hatfield, on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 5th. The first race was won by the Freshmen, beating the Seniors half a minute, while the second was taken by the Juniors, defeating a crew from the Amherst Agricultural College.

RICHARD HARDING, winner of Doggett's Coat and Badge Race this year, and H. Thomas rowed from Putney to Mortlake for £25 a side on Oct. 11th, the latter winning easily by four or five lengths, his opponent being thoroughly outpaced.

COMMODORE JAMES ASHBURY, of the yacht Cambria, and Mr. James Aiken, of Sydney, arrived in San Francisco on Nov. 2d. They are the guests of the San Francisco Yacht Club.

BILLIARDS.

RUDOLPHE'S CHALLENGE TO C. DION.

AN ACCEPTANCE, BUT NO MATCH.

Three issues back there appeared in the CLIPPER, above the signature of A. P. Rudolphe, a challenge to Cyrille Dion, to the effect that Rudolphe would "play him at any game, for $500 or upwards." What Rudolphe meant when he expressed a willingness to play Dion "at any game" has since become extremely doubtful, though at the time it seemed clear enough that he meant any game usually played on a billiard table. The challenge itself we regarded as a formal assumption of superiority over Mr. Dion at all kinds of billiards, which assumption Mr. Rudolphe was prepared to make good by contending for a stake worthy of his reputation and beyond the reach of triflers. Assuming that the spirit and intent of the challenge were in full keeping with the broadness of its language, Mr. Dion, having been tendered the choice of games, nominated that which he regards as his best—just as, had the challenge been addressed to them individually, Joseph Dion would have been justified in naming the English game or Carme Sebastopol pool, or some Russian player the Russian game, or John Roberts the game of pyramid pool, or John McDevitt his favorite game of four ball carom, still in vogue. Dion's nomination of pin-pool, to play for $25 or $50 a side, until $500 was lost by either, was announced in last week's CLIPPER, in authoritative answer to Rudolphe's challenge, the boldness of which we had commended. Dion's proper acceptance has since been met—inferentially, but we have reason to believe none less authoritatively and finally—in the singular rejoinder that, though a game, "pin pool calls for no bold or gentle manipulation," and "is a game of chance." Rudolphe, therefore, declines to play pin pool. As it is five times more difficult to knock down a given pin than to carom upon a given 2¼ ball, and as those players have been most successful who, like C. Dion and "Albert," enjoy the reputation of being boldest at pin pool, the billiard profession, so far from accepting Rudolphe's grounds of declination as sufficient, are apt to attribute this retrogressive movement to the fact that Cyrille has already made him pay rather dear for his experience as pin pool. But be that as it may, now that Dion has responded, Rudolphe's "broad, sweeping challenge"—his comprehensive, unqualified terms—all boil down to narrow conditions. His challenge having appeared originally in the CLIPPER, it is due to ourselves to say that we published it in good faith and in the firm belief that Rudolphe meant all he said. Under the circumstances, we are justified in questioning his motive in issuing that challenge, and the justification becomes all the stronger in view of the fact that since his declination to play Dion at pin pool he has repeated his original mistake, if mistake it was. He has issued even a broader and more sweeping challenge in these words:—"I will give any player the odds of ten per cent. at any game selected, for from $500 a side upwards." In the absence of any phrase qualifying the word "selected," it is clearly the right of the challenged party to name or select the game. Now, does this second challenge mean carom only? Or does it mean the american—and which American? An explicit answer will save people the costs of telegraphing players to ascertain if they will play their favorite games with Rudolphe.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.—At the urgent request of Frank Parker's representative, we last week called Rudolphe's attention to the fact that, if he had covered the former's money, no announcement of this fact had, as is customary, been made. It has since been acknowledged that Parker's money was covered Oct. 22d, and the match is therefore fully negotiated. Having learned by telegraph that Joseph Dion had re-challenged, Parker, who forwarded his money to this city, requested that if any one had already challenged his money would be returned to him. As Dion had already a match on with Deery he decided to step out of the way for Parker, and "Old Reliable," when he was informed that his challenge had become effective, wrote back that he will do his best for Rudolphe." The latter is anxious to play the match as quickly as possible, for, as he says, he "wants to make money," and he regards Parker as an easy conquest. The Chicago experts' pending engagements at the three-ball game prevent his paying the slightest attention to the four-ball, which he has not practised for many months, and at which he has not played a match over a longer time. His policy, therefore, is to defer the contest in order to get practice, and he will probably name a day in January next. His representative in this city has full power to arrange all the details, but he declines to negotiate as to such important matters as to time and place without direct consultation with his principal. Parker was telegraphed to on these points on the 4th inst. As no answer has been received, the player has probably left Chicago temporarily.

A GREAT MATCH ON THE TAPIS.—We have the best authority for saying that the last challenge issued by Rudolphe will be accepted, that the stake will be at least as high as $1,000, and that pin-pool will not be named this time. Moreover, prior to the issue of said challenge, it had been agreed upon by parties outside of this state, to back a certain player against Rudolphe, at the regular four-ball carom game, for $2,000 a side, even up. Before all the money had been put up, however, Rudolphe came out with his offer to give any one the odds of ten per cent. at any game. That is a better thing than playing him even. Let us have no more challenges, but a great contest. We have to add that we are not at liberty to make public, at present, either the name of the accepting player or the style of game he will select.

ANOTHER FOUR-HANDED MATCH FOR CHICAGO.—There is every likelihood of another interesting four-handed match being made: Frank Parker and Henry Rhines to encounter the two Dions at the three ball game, 400 points up, for $500 a side. As soon as the elder Dion returns from San Francisco it is believed that articles will be signed to play at Chicago.

THE CANADIAN TOURNAMENT.—It has been decided upon that the games in the approaching tournament for the championship of all Canada shall be 500 points up, four ball carooms, on a 5½x11 carom table. In all subsequent contests for the champion cue the number of points will be 1,200.

ARRIVAL OF DION IN SAN FRANCISCO.—Joseph Dion reached San Francisco on the 4th inst., and met with a cheering welcome at the hands of the billiardists of that city.

THE RING.

THE POSTPONED FIGHT BETWEEN ALLEN AND GALLAGHER.

ALLEN AN EASY WINNER.

In another part of this issue appears an account of the arrest of Tom Allen and Jim Gallagher, the consequent postponement of the fight and their subsequent agreement to do battle within fifty miles of Kansas City on Tuesday, 8th inst. In thus agreeing, however, it was arranged that if either party considered it a dvisable another day could be selected, and as the 8th is election day, it was generally believed that the mill would not come off before the succeeding Thursday, or 10th inst. This had the effect of throwing the authorities off the scent, as well as those who by their lack of discretion so often cause the calculations of those interested to be knocked in the head, and with a view to prevent further interruption and make all bets stand good, it was resolved to bring the affair off on the 5th inst. Accordingly at an early hour on said morning the principals, their seconds and a few others, numbering in all not over two score, proceeded to the island opposite the arsenal, below St. Louis, where a ring was quickly formed and the men lost no time in disrobing and getting to business of a serious nature, Allen having the services of Barney Aaron and Collins, while Mike McCoole and Tom Kelly (we believe) acted in like capacity for Gallagher. We need not give Allen's record, as our readers are familiar with it. Gallagher is only a novice, having fought but twice before, both his opponents being unknown to fame. He beat George Cary, near New Orleans, in 14 rounds, for $100, Jan. 25th last; on Aug. 31st he beat Owen Meekin, at Carroll Island, near St. Louis, 11 rounds for $500. He was born in April, 1847, stands 6 ft. 2¼in., and the display he made in the above battles, particularly as a wrestler, made him numerous admirers, as may be adjudged from the fact of his being matched against Allen, even at the odds of $1,000 to $500, given by the latter. As our account of the battle has not yet come to hand we will confine ourselves to a brief mention of the same as transmitted to us by the telegraph. Allen appears to have had even an easier thing of it than those who gave the least credit to Gallagher expected, hitting the latter wherever and whenever he wanted, obtaining first blood in the opening round and the first knock down in the fifth, after which he had Gallagher pretty much at his mercy, Jim being accredited with but one blow of any consequence, which Allen napped under the left eye, but it did no damage. Tom wisely refrained from wrestling with his more powerful antagonist and allowed himself to be thrown fourteen times. Sixteen rounds were fought in 16 minutes and 30 seconds, and Gallagher was badly punished, while Allen was unhurt. A purse of $100 was raised on the ground for the defeated man, of which the victor contributed $50. He exhibited gameness, battling resolutely against fate, and Allen afterward offered to back him against any novice in the country for $500 a side.

THE TWO THOUSAND DOLLAR MATCH.—Last week's CLIPPER contained a notification that the match for $1,000 a side between Bryan Campbell and David Lewis, to fight at 140lbs. weight, within two hundred miles of Mahanoy City, Pa., on Dec. 10th, was all right, they having chosen a final stakeholder in the person of Thos. Jones, of the above-named place, though, for reasons then given, we declined to comply with a request to forward to him the money previously staked with us until further advised. Having received the necessary information, we have forwarded the amount, $500, on behalf of Lewis and $50 on behalf of Campbell. The men are both in training, and, though not known to fame, they are possessed of considerable science, added to sufficient endurance and pluck to ensure a good fight. It will be one, too, upon which there will, doubtless, be a heap of money staked, each man having no lack of friends who will "go their pile" upon him in such a contest.

MURRAY AND DONOVAN.—We have received a lengthy communication, in answer to that contained in our last issue, concerning the late fight between the above men, but as both sides have had a hearing we cannot spare further space to the controversy. Suffice it to say that the letter before us refutes the statements made by "A Lover of Fair Play," and fully corroborates the account of the mill as originally published in these columns.

PATSY HOGAN, a young fellow who is a good card at any exhibition, and who is always ready to assist a brother sparrer, will be the recipient of a benefit at Bill Clark's, The Arbour, 50 West Houston street, on the evening of Monday next, Nov. 14th, when an excellent programme of sport will be offered to those who admire "that sort of thing, you know."

HARRY MONTAGUE, the European agent and Secretary to Jem Mace, purposes leaving this port for England on the 12th inst., per the steamer City of Paris. He has made many friends during his brief sojourn among us, who will regret his departure, join with us in wishing him a safe and pleasant voyage, and be glad to welcome him when he returns, as he intends doing next summer.

RATTING CONTEST.—A ratting match came off on the 2d inst., at Jim Hanlon's, Philadelphia, for a silver collar and leading strap, each dog to kill ten rats. There were eight entries, and the prize was won by Adaire's white bull stut, 14lbs., killing her allowance in 1 minute 12 seconds. Three Scotch terriers each slaughtered their ten in 1:30.

WE have letters for James Gallagher, W. H. Adsetts Joe Coburn and Wm. H. Young (2).

THE GAMBLER'S LOVE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY GYPSY.

Oh Maud! with the purple blue eyes,
My Maud with the bronze-brown hair;
My darling, my jewel, my pride,
Oh! never was queen half so fair.
Thou art mine by Heaven's own law;
All mine, thy beauty and grace,
And clasped to my heart, my own love,
Lift up thy proud, earnest face.

Oh love! I am weary and sad,
And racked with passionate pain,
With nought to cheer but the trusting love
I staked my soul to gain.
Kiss me again, and again, dear Maud,
I'd quench this terrible drouth;
This fever that's parching heart and brain
With the dew of your cool, sweet mouth.

For "hearts are trumps" to-night, love,
And a winning hand you hold!
We'll play out the game, for to-morrow's sun
Must find me hard and cold—
Must find me hard and cold, dear,
As a "sporting man!" should be;
But the one bright spot in my reckless life
Is my love, dear one, for thee.

Then kiss me and love me to-night Maud,
While I am yours alone;
To-morrow the soldier's game resumes,
And the devil will rule his own.
Oh Maud! my peerless, patient one,
Is there a God above?
Can thy pure lips e'er bless the hour
That made thee a gambler's love?

A FRAUDULENT WEDDING.

AN INJURED WOMAN SUES FOR DIVORCE.

In our last issue we took occasion to call attention to the merits of John G. Boyd as a counselor at law, and in endorsement thereof and to show that we are not alone in our opinion, we here quote from the Sunday News, of the 30th ult., a report of a very important divorce case brought up before Judge Jones on a motion for alimony and counsel fees and the appointment of a referee, Counselor John G. Boyd attorney for the plaintiff and John N. Andrews attorney for the defendant. It appears that the parties had been secretly and informally married and had lived together as husband and wife, and publicly acknowledged each other as such for more than a year, when the husband became suddenly enamored with the sylph-like form and seductive smiles of a beautiful blonde, to whose attractions he succumbed and basely abandoned the wife of his youth and recklessly rushed into matrimony with his ideal Venus. The circumstances of the case will more fully appear on reference to the plaintiff's affidavit, in which Julia Carris, the plaintiff, deposes that her name, previous to her marriage with Joseph Carris, was Julia Sheridan, that being her family name. In the year 1857 she first came to this city from the city of Troy, where she had been brought up and educated. She continues:—"Shortly after my arrival here I learned the business of dress making, and up to the date of my said marriage I earned my own livelihood as a dress maker and seamstress. I first met and became acquainted with Joseph in the month of August, 1866, at the house where I was boarding, on the corner of Eighteenth street and Ninth avenue, and in which he had just taken up apartments as a boarder also. For about a year thereafter I occasionally saw him in the house, but no intimacy whatever existed between us during that time, but about the month of September, 1867, he began to pay me very marked attention and sought my society more frequently than I approved of. This continued until about the middle of November, 1867, when he made a proposal of marriage to me, which I rejected. About a month thereafter he renewed his proposal of marriage, when I informed him that I should think favorably of the matter, and advised him to take time and consider the matter also, as I did not think that his circumstances would allow of his assuming the responsibilities of a husband. He then told me that he did not depend entirely upon his city income; that he had a large farm in Westchester county, the rents from which amounted to a large sum, quite sufficient for the support of himself and a wife. Nothing further of any importance occurred after this interview until about the 20th of December, 1868, when he implored me to give him a decided answer in regard to my acceptance of his proposal of marriage, which I did, and we then mutually promised and engaged ourselves to be married as soon thereafter as his circumstances would permit. From that date we spent all our spare time in each other's company and his manner towards me was as affectionate and devoted as I could have wished; indeed, I considered myself the most fortunate and happy woman in the world, in the certain prospect of soon becoming the wife of such a noble and devoted man. He became everything to me, my beau ideal of everything that is lofty and good, and my confidence in his honor and integrity was unbounded. We went to church together. We read together the favorite books and papers which he always brought me. We sung together our favorite songs. We took long walks together, and he would frequently hire a carriage so that we might enjoy a drive together, and thus I learned to bestow upon him all the love and affection which it is in the nature of woman to lavish upon the object of her adoration. On the night of the 27th of April, 1869, he invited me to take a short trip on the cars to Westchester county, and, as usual, I agreed. After we had been on board of the cars a short time he said to me, "Julia, wouldn't you like to get married to-night?" I answered, "No; I am not dressed properly to get married. Besides," I said, "I expect to get married by Dr. Morris." He then said, "Dr. Morris is staying out here and I am acquainted with him; besides, neither of us have any person or anything to care for, and we may get married at any time, and we may as well get married to-night." I then said, "If you wish it, I am satisfied to get married to-night." We shortly afterwards got off the cars and went to a private house, where we were shown into a private room, and a person approached and stated that he was Dr. Morris. I did not know that he was not Dr. Morris, as I had never seen that gentleman, although I had frequently heard of him. Mr. Carris stated to the person, who stated that we came to get married." The gentleman answered, "Very well," and, after some conversation, he proceeded with the ceremony, which being gone through, he pronounced us man and wife in the usual way, and Mr. Carris paid him his fee and we left. After this we went to reside at No. 227 Eighth avenue, where we lived together as husband and wife up to the month of June last, during all that time he was all to me that any husband could be—kind, affectionate and attentive, and in society, always with apparent pride and pleasure, spoke of me as his wife, and stated on several occasions in company that he was a fortunate and lucky man to have such a wife as I was. About the latter end of June last he suddenly abandoned me, without giving me any reason for so doing, and with the slightest provocation on my part. On the 4th of July I discovered that he had been keeping company with another woman for some time previous thereto, and with whom he is now living. Her name is Annie Battie. I believe they have since been married. I afterwards discovered that he was circulating false and evil reports concerning me—that I was a bad woman, that I had only been his mistress, &c. Then I had him arrested for abandonment. He swore in the trial that I was not his wife, that we never had been married and that he could not live with me. I then had my case adjourned to get time to obtain a copy of the marriage certificate, and accordingly went to Dr. Morris to get one, and, to my surprise and dismay, discovered that he was not the person who had married us. It was then that I first learned that I had been deceived—heartlessly, cruelly deceived. I, the unfortunate victim, never for a moment thought! None but God knows the mental torture which I have since then endured. Life has seemed utterly valueless to me, and the future clouded in black despair. My case was, of course, dismissed, not being able to produce my marriage certificate; and it was then, under the advice of my lawyer, Mr. John G. Boyd, that I concluded to commence the present action for divorce, hoping thereby to establish my position as a married woman and justify my actions and my relations with the said Joseph Carris in the eyes of my friends and the world, as I feel confident I am wholly without blame and justifiable in the sight of God.

JULIA CARRIS.

The further hearing of the motion for alimony and counsel fee was adjourned until the 4th inst., and John C. Bushnell, Esq., counselor-at-law, was appointed referee to hear and determine the issues of the case. Mr. Boyd is generally very successful in his cases. Undoubtedly his construction of the law in this case will prove to be correct, which is:—"That the ceremony, though informal, followed by mutual public acknowledgement and cohabitation as husband and wife, is a marriage in the eyes of the law."

[At the hearing above indicated Mr. Boyd's construction was fully endorsed, even more fully than was expected, for Judge Jones granted the motion for alimony and counsel fees, and referred it to Mr. Bushnell to ascertain the defendant's circumstances, and fix the amount he should pay the plaintiff and her counsel; the former for her support and the latter for expenses in conducting the suit. As might be supposed, the plaintiff was highly gratified at the result of Counsellor Boyd's pleading in her behalf.—ED. CLIP.]

SEEING THE ELEPHANT.

A PECUNIARY PORTRAIT OF THE ANIMAL.

Butler county has had the reputation for a number of years of giving a modest radical majority of about five hundred. Who these five hundred are we know not, but a gentleman who happened in to our city a day or two ago, from the greenness he has exhibited during his sojourn here, must surely belong to the lost five hundred. The name of the gentleman referred to is Douthett, and we regret to say that his visit to our city has proved a decidedly unprofitable one. Mr. Douthett being of a gay and festive nature, was desirous of seeing the elephant in all its various phases, and, in order to be able to detail all the peculiarities of the animal, on his return to his native heath took in "the hill." The portion of our municipality referred to contains many varieties of the animal which Mr. Douthett was desirous of viewing, so he found his way into one of the cages in the Seventh ward, where the elephant was exhibited at a moderate price of admission. So struck was he with the ivory displayed—so bewildered with the beautiful fall in the animal's back—so carried away with the gorgeous contents of the animal's trunk, the contour of its limbs, and the hazel hue of its eyes, that he fell in love with it. He had been at the circus and had seen the animal eat hay, but here was an elephant that could quaff champagne. What a sensation this interesting creature would create in Butler county could he only take it there. He determined to see the proprietors in the morning, and, in order to have a good talk and be up early, he was kindly provided by the elephant keeper with a chamber for the night.

Mr. Douthett, before retiring, carefully placed his Butler county watch and the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, together with a check on the Diamond Savings Bank for one hundred dollars, under his pillow for safe keeping. In his dreams he was with the elephant, and doubtless imagined himself in the Garden of Eden. Eastern nabobs and Turkish harems passed through his brain, as calmly he slumbered on his bed of down. Just as the gray dawn was tipping the clouds in the eastern horizon, while the huge volumes of smoke were rolling up towards the heavens, there was a most thundering knocking at Mr. Douthett's door. Up he sprang, when a beautiful little elephant, clad in the prettiest of white night gowns—a talking elephant—said to Mr. Douthett:—"Awake, slumberer; there has been some one in your room." Instinctively the half sleeping man reached under his pillow for his watch and money, but it was gone. The bed was rifled, the pillows overturned, the bed clothes scattered about the floor, but the valuables were not to be found. Hurriedly did Mr. Douthett assume the garb of man, and, with the alacrity of a hunted venison did he visit the magisterial residence of Alderman Butler. A knocking, such as would have awakened Duncan or a night policeman, ensued 'ere the alderman's head projected from a second story window. Eventually the door was opened, the early caller was admitted, his story told, a search warrant was issued, the cage was searched but the search was fruitless. Mr. Douthett has gone home.—Pittsburgh Post.

MARRIAGE MARRED BY AGE.—A high life wedding was abruptly terminated the other day at Terre Haute, Ind., simply because the haustier bridegroom in prospective, in examining the family Bible, found that the would-be better half was nine years older than the endorsement of her mamma calle

NAPOLEONIC SCANDAL.

The highly scandalous affair of Miss Marguerite Bellanger and President Devienne, brought to light by the publication of the ex-Emperor's private correspondence, naturally produces a great sensation in Europe, especially among the mushroom aristocracy, as it exhibits much too plainly for them the rotten condition of their society, and of the "low life in high places" on which law makers and law expounders go it blind. What is new is the questionable paternity of a little boy, and the disgraceful part played by the first judge of the empire in an affair of hush money. But all Paris can attest the truth of the reiterated statement in the letter to her imperial lover, that he had done a "very great deal for her." Marguerite Bellanger's horses, carriages, dogs, jewelry and loud dresses were well known in the Bois de Boulogne, and every cabwere well known in the Bois de Boulogne, and every cabman knows the snug and gorgeously furnished mansion in the Rue de Verneuil, where, within a stone's throw of the Avenue des Champs Elysees, in which he took his official promenade with the Empress, the Emperor was wont to pass hours of idleness with Marguerite Bellanger. Only at the beginning of this year, and some time after President Devienne had effected an arrangement, a husband was found for the lady. On the occasion of her marriage she objected that her hotel in the Rue de Verneuil smelt of the stables, and thereupon the Emperor gave her a sumptuous palace in the Avenue de la Reine Hortense, which, in her marriage settlement, published in the Figaro of the time, was valued at 1,500,000f. Her sale in the Rue de Verneuil produced 300,000f., and she bought in some magnificent Gobelin tapestry, with the cipher of the crown, which the auctioneer put into the catalogue to excite curiosity. The husband assigned to her was an employee in a linendraper's shop; but as his function was to keep the books, she rather vitily said of him that he was not a tradesman, but a man of letters. Writing this, as I am doing in the very house, now the Hotel de la Croustille, in which Madame de la Valliere was born, I can only wonder that such joyeusetes du Roy, indulged in by the late successor to the throne of Louis XIV., should have required such ponderous machinery as that of the intervention of a chief justice to hush them up. From the variety of circumstances I believe the explanation of the extreme anxiety which made him invoke the assistance of President Devienne to be this. At a time when the Prince Imperial was in very bad health the Emperor was certainly under the impression (whether truly or not) that he was the father of Marguerite Bellanger's boy. Imparting his grief to her at the prospect of being deprived of posterity, she, in melting moments, got him to listen to her complacently, when she said her son was his, and that, apart from social conventions which he might overrule, the direct line of the Napoleons was in any event assured. The Emperor, who had reserved to himself by his constitution an absolute power to adopt an heir to the exclusion of Prince Napoleon, might very well have caressed the idea over a cigarette that if he lost his legitimate son his power and might would be equal to the achievement of a plebiscite confirming his adoption of an illegitimate one. Later, the Prince Imperial got better; the Empress rebelled against the Marguerite Bellanger scandal, and a moment came when the Emperor thought it expedient to obtain a disavowal from Miss Marguerite of his paternity of her child at any price.

A FALSE FAIR ONE'S FATE.

A case of scandal in high social and religious circles has recently been brought to light at Kilmarnock, Va., in which it appears that the wife of the Rev. Addison Hall had for some time been on a degree of intimacy with a young lawyer named Elias Edmonds that excited the suspicions of her confiding spouse. The lady was a native of Lowell, Mass., from which cold and passionless region she had recently been transplanted to the genial temperature of the sunny south. The affair grew into an amour, and the suspicion of the betrayed husband became stronger as he witnessed the half-concealed terms of intimacy between the guilty pair. Thus the matter progressed until Thursday, Oct. 13th, when, his wife being absent from home, the Rev. Mr. Hall, by means of a false key, opened her trunk, and, to his horror, discovered a large number of letters from her paramour, the youthful lawyer, who resides in the same village, and was a member of his congregation. These epistles were full of devotion and expressions of love, such as usually emanate from a passionately amorous youth. It was the more astonishing, too, as the lady was several years the senior of her lover, and the mother of three children. As soon as the matter became known the community were astounded at the infatuation of the woman and the baseness of the young man, who had hitherto stood high in their estimation. The betrayed husband at once sought a lawyer, who drew up a deed of separation, which he signed, and which the woman who had destroyed his earthly happiness also signed. Shortly after this the woman was placed in charge of a personal friend of the preacher, in whose company she soon left her home, family and husband, going she knew not where. So great was the indignation among the people that on the following court day an indignation meeting was held, at which resolutions condemning the guilty pair and condoling the injured husband were passed. While the above meeting was in session an affray occurred between two men named Wooten and Sorrell, during which the former was stabbed by the latter in the left side, below the ribs, inflicting a wound one inch and a half long and three inches deep. The wound is said to be fatal, and Sorrell was committed to jail to await an examination.

A VILLAIN FOILED.—The usual quiet village of Forke River, N. J., has been the scene of considerable excitement for several days, caused by the efforts of a graceless scamp named Dan Chamberlain to rob a young lady, named Lottie Webb, of her virtue by force. A. N. Y. Herald correspondent, in giving the particulars, says that "she, in company with another young lady, was coming from church. After leaving the other lady Miss Webb had to go about half a mile through a piece of woods. There Chamberlain waylaid her, and, tied her hands to some trees, and made a desperate effort to accomplish his purpose. She resisted with all her might, and screamed and succeeded in breaking the cords with which he had tied her. He then grew desperate and choked her, throwing her down and endeavored to gag her by thrusting his pocket handkerchief into her mouth. Fortunately her cries attracted the attention of a young man by the name of George Taylor, who hastened to the scene, rescued the young girl and conveyed her to her home, preventing the scoundrel from accomplishing his purpose, which might have ended in a tragedy. Chamberlain, in the meantime, left the place, but was captured nearly forty miles from home by officer Barkalow, and he is now lodged safely in our county jail at Toms River. Our courts will be held in January, when he will come under the tender mercies of Judge Sc udder, a terror to all evil doers."

HOW SHE HAD HIM.—A man named Hotchkiss, over in Newark, N. J., the other night, thought he would save some time in scaring his wife by dropping a loose brick down the chimney into the fire place in her room. So he crept softly out of bed, and with nothing on but his night shirt sneaked up stairs and got out on the roof. Mr. Hotchkiss dropped nineteen bricks down the chimney, each one with a vigorous slam, but his wife never screamed a solitary time. So then Mr. Hotchkiss gave it up, and thought he would go down stairs; but he found that Mrs. Hotchkiss had had her head out of the trap door watching him all the time, and when he got there she had shut the trap and fastened it on the inside. It may be as well to state that Mr. Hotchkiss spent the rest of the night sitting on the sharp peak of the roof, with his trailing garments of the night fluttering in the evening breeze, singing "I'm Lonely To-Night." Mrs. H. intimated to her confidential friend that she thought she had him.

ELOPEMENT.—A married man at St. Albans, Vt., most respectably connected in that village and holder of a government office, eloped from St. Albans on Monday, with a young married woman, who was married but a few days since. The husband of the woman followed them and procured their arrest at Montpelier.

ATHLETIC SPORTS IN CANADA.

One of the finest athletic meetings ever held in the New Dominion took place at Montreal on the afternoon of Oct. 22d, the programme being unusually interesting. The weather, however, was raw and unpleasant, deterring many from attending and causing numerous others to leave before the programme of sport had been completed. The judges were Hon. H. Starnes, A. A. Stevenson and Alex. McGibbon. Starter, S. J. Doran. Messrs. Lawlor and Lanigan were timers. All starts were made by pistol shot. First on the programme was a two mile walk for a medal presented by A. A. Stevenson. For this there were four entries, viz:—Walls, Brady, Maltby and Rooney. Walls came in first. Time, 17m. 25secs.; Maltby second in 17m. 19secs. Brady fell at the fourth lap and gave up.

Next was a running long jump; first prize, $5; two entries, Maling and Anderson, the latter of whom won, jumping 18ft.; Maling jumped 14ft. 5in.

A half mile race for a medal presented by the Montreal Lacrosse Club then followed. There were four entries—Blacklock, Anderson, Macdonnell, of Morrisburg, and Logan. In this a good start was made, Macdonnell leading, but, meeting with an accident, fell out, as also did Anderson, and Logan won easily in 2:48.

The next was a hurdle race of 125 yards, heats, best two in three, for a medal presented by A. A. Stevenson. For this some of the best hurdle men in the city entered, viz.:—Hood, Beckett, Burgess, Shea and Armstrong. The Lawn got off well together, Hood taking the lead easily and jumping the hurdles beautifully, followed closely by Beckett, in which order the first heat terminated. In the second heat Beckett took the lead, but was passed by Hood on the third hurdle, who came in winner of the race, Beckett second and Armstrong third. Hood's time was—first heat, 18 secs.; second heat, 18¾ secs.

A two-mile race was next in order, for prizes of $30 and $5, with $10 extra for the first white man. For this there was a large number of entries, including Keraronwe and two other Indians. The whites were Boyle, Stitt and Brindley. Keraronwe, of course, got away first, and was followed by Young Thomas, another Indian, Boyle, Brindley and Stitt. The greatest interest of the race was centred in Boyle and Brindley, who kept passing and repassing one another in the most amusing manner. Keraronwe rapidly increased his lead, and at the twelfth round lapped Boyle, who in the meantime had been passed by Stitt, who commenced to show good running powers. At the ninth round Brindley confessed himself beaten and fell out. At the thirteenth Stitt was putting on spurts and endeavoring to run down Young Thomas, who, however, found little difficulty in keeping his place until the sixteenth lap proclaimed him second. The following is a summary of the time made by Keraronwe on each lap:—31½ secs., 1:04, 1:46, 2:28, 3:09, 3:50½, 4:30½, 5:08¾, 5:48½, 6:37½, 7:20, 7:59, 8:45½, 9:28½, 10:13½, 10:59. Young Thomas second in 11:03; Stitt third in 11:45; and Boyle fourth in 13:06¼.

The next race was for a quarter of a mile, for a silver cup. In this there were five entries, viz.:—Newell, Fraser, T. D. Armstrong, Anderson and Massey. This was a very good race, Armstrong, who came in first, in king a splendid run, and distancing all the rest by some thirty or forty yards at the close, Newell second, Fraser third.

The great race of the afternoon, one mile handicap, followed. In this Brand, who had 140 yards start, came in first in 4m. 54secs., followed by Keraronwe in 4m. 57¼secs., Mudge and Young Thomas a tie in 5m. 16secs. The position was given to Mudge by the judges.

A very interesting race, being 100 yards dash in heats, best two in three, for a gold medal, was the next event. In this Wood took the first heat in splendid style, followed by Beckett and Ermatinger. The next was taken by Shea, followed by Ermatinger and Wood. The next by Fraser, followed by Ermatinger and Shea. There was then one heat each by three different parties, and the judges decided that another heat should be run. This was taken by Wood, Ermatinger second.

The next on the programme was a running hop, step and jump, for prizes of $5 and $2.50, for which there were a large number of entries Husher first, 40ft. 8in.; Macdonnell second, 40ft. 5in.

A half mile green race came next, for a medal presented by the mayor. For this also there were a great number of entries. Taken by Miller, Massey a good second.

By this time it was raining fast, with a cold, sharp wind from the northwest, which made it very unpleasant, and most of the spectators left for home. There was only another race on the programme, viz.:—a consolation race, for $4 and $2.50, and this was pushed through in a hurry. This was once round the course taken by Young in 29¾secs.; Shea a good second.

THE COPYRIGHT LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

During the past session of Congress the copyright laws of the country were revised, consolidate ..nd amended by an Act of Congress which was approv.. July 8th, 1870, and as many important changes have been made we publish all the sections of "An Act to Revise, Consolidate and Amend the Statutes relating to Patents and Copyrights," approved July 8th, 1870, which relate to copyrights:—

SECTION 85. And be it further enacted, That all records and other things relating to copyrights, and required by law to be preserved, shall be under the control of the Librarian of Congress, and kept and preserved in the Library of Congress; and the Librarian of Congress shall have the immediate care and supervision thereof; and, under the supervision of the Joint Committee of Congress on the Library, shall perform all acts and duties required by law touching copyrights. The Librarian shall procure a seal to be provided for said office, with such device as the Joint Committee on the Library may approve, with which all records or papers issued from said office, and to be used in evidence, shall be authenticated. He shall also give an additional bond, with sureties, to the Treasurer of the United States, in the sum of five thousand dollars, with the condition that he will render to the proper officers of the treasury a true account of all moneys received by virtue of his office. He shall also make an annual report to Congress of the number and description of copyright publications for which entries have been made during the year. And the Librarian of Congress shall receive a yearly compensation of four thousand dollars, to commence when this act shall take effect.

86. And be it further enacted, That any citizen of the United States, or resident therein, who shall be the author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or negative thereof, or of a painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and his executors, administrators, or assigns shall, upon complying with the provisions of this act, have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing and vending the same; and in the case of a dramatic composition, of doing in the very house, now the Hotel de la Croustille, in which Madame de la Valliere was born, I can only wonder that such joyeusetes du Roy, indulged in by the late successor to the throne of Louis XIV., should have required such ponderous machinery as that of the intervention of a chief justice to hush them up. AGITATION FOR CHEAP PRICES AT THE LONDON THEATRES.

Mr. Dion Boucicault has written two letters to the London press, strongly advocating the reduction of the prices of admission in the London theatres, which has caused considerable editorial comment, and drawn forth from private individuals letters of reply, but as all the statements are to a considerable degree erroneous, we publish merely such notes of correction as will be found to be substantiated by facts:—

SIR.—Eight years ago I invited public attention to the want of proper accommodation and comfort in the London theatres, pointing out the superior attractions afforded by the model halls in these parts. After a brief agitation, carried on for two years, we succeeded in a very satisfactory result. Seven new and commodious theatres were built in the West End. The first effect of this extension was to abandon the value of theatrical service. Actors now obtain much larger salaries, and dramatic authors have been benefited in a still greater degree. It was expected that the high rentals of the old houses would have differed in the case of this competition. Such has not been the case. The rents of the Haymarket, Lyceum, Adelphi and Princess' are precisely the same as they were before the Queen's, the Gaiety, the Holborn, the Globe and the Vaudeville were brought out. The final step will come when I contemplated from the first, it will be accomplished. We must reduce the prices of admission. Seven shillings to the stalls, five shillings to the boxes, two and seven three guineas for a private box, form a prohibitory scale. What is the consequence of this one half, if not two-thirds, of the nightly occupants of these high priced places are "dead-heads;" that is, persons admitted by free admissions to garnish empty seats. Such is invariably the case, except when some very great attraction brings a rush at the doors (the parquette) and the first circle are reserved at one dollar—four shillings sterling, and the lowest price at any part of the theatre is fifty cents—two English shillings. At the Haymarket and Drury-lane the scale of prices may be still lower, and at the Grand Opera House, Wallack's Theatre the stalls and best seats in the dress circle are six shillings—one dollar and a half, and the tariffs of the Boston and Philadelphia theatres of the best class range about the same. I grew the property of the theatre in the northern states of which no so low an admission as one shilling. Fisk's Opera House, which is a people's theatre, charges one dollar admission and one dollar and a half for reserved seats. The topmost gallery is fifty cents, and this usually reserved for the very humblest class of the negro population. Some recent experience in the United States in respect to the salaries of stock actors do not agree with Mr. Boucicault's statements. Salaries are about double in America; but when the increased cost of living is taken into account, and the high rate of taxation into consideration, I doubt if the American actor is much better off than his English brother. I have heard actors protest that it is more difficult to procure an opening in New York than in London; and the pecuniary results of the best engagements are not greater for the run of pieces, is by no means favorable to the actor's condition, who, a great portion of his time, is in the market.

There is one admirable feature about American theatres which the London managers might imitate to advantage—I mean the length of the performance—which begins at eight o'clock and terminates before eleven. One play usually forms the entire evening's entertainment. A new piece is always produced, as a rule, once in ten months, and never saw a farce or an afterpiece. In London, where people reside at long distances, the system of shorter performances would work well and save the manager and his company two hours' expenses. I never saw the Boston orchestra at any event thing to find a farce being acted close upon midnight, with a few sleepy people dotted about the house, the bulk of the audience having departed. Pray excuse my reforms not worth thinking about?

Yours obediently, HOWARD PAUL.

Mr. Paul makes many errors. The price of general admission to Niblo's Garden is 75 cents, and the holder of this kind of ticket is entitled to take any seat that may not be reserved. Those reserved are clearly designated by a large card being placed thereon the word "TAKEN," and it is always the intention of the managers to leave unreserved the two rear rows of the parquet circle. In the second tier, or dress circle, the seat, if reserved, costs $1, and there are always plenty of seats for the accommodation of those holding admission tickets. His statement of the prices at Wallack's is still more erroneous. The admission here is 75 cts.; orchestra chairs, $1.50; parquet, in rear of orchestra chairs, if reserved, $1, otherwise 75 cts., and parquet in front of circle (second tier) are the same as the parquet. It has ever been the rule at this theatre that reserved seats can only be claimed before the ending of the first act of the play. It is a common nightly occurrence to see several seats in the front row of the dress circle unoccupied at the fall of the drop marking the termination of the first act; and at this time any person, who may have been admitted upon the floor, can take a ticket for one of these and retain it for the balance of the evening. With regard to "no respectable theatre in the Northern States that has so low an admission as one shilling" (25cts), we would say that at the following theatres there is a portion of the house set apart for that price of admission:—Trimble's Opera House, Albany, N. Y.; Academy of Music, Cleveland, O.; Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, O.; Opera House, Louisville, Ky.; Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., and many others, all first class theatres. With regard to the Grand Opera House (Fisk's), the price of admission is fifty cents, and save upon extraordinary occasions persons holding these tickets can always obtain good seats upon the lower floor (parquet circle), and the "topmost gallery" is 50cts., and not fifty. During several years, when the civil war raged and gold was at a premium of nearly 200 per cent., many of the principal western theatres only charged fifty cents admission, and seventy-five cents for reserved seats. Outside of the city of New York the highest price charged for any reserved seat is one dollar, with the single exception of the Globe Theatre, Boston, which, at the commencement of the present season, raised the price of the orchestra seats only to $1.50. The admission to the family circle is 50 cents.

A gentleman who has just returned to London from America publishes the following:—

A seat in the stalls, dress circle and upper circle costs one dollar fifty cents (6s. 7½d. sterling) at all the leading New York theatres, and that the lowest admission in the second tier is "Booth's" at fifty cents (2s. 10½d. sterling), so that the theatrical tariff in America is higher than that adopted by the London managers.

With regard to the dress circle and upper circle the above explanation refutes it. A second says:—

I should not care

BASE BALL.

MUTUALS vs. RED STOCKINGS.

THE MUTES AGAIN BADLY DEFEATED.

The Mutuals played their fourth game with the Reds this season, in Cincinnati, on the 2d, and sustained their fourth defeat. They have thus in the last two years experienced six successive lost games, without a single offset, the scores being 4 to 2; 15 to 5; 16 to 5; 15 to 13; 7 to 1; and in this game 20 to 7, or a total of 80 to 33 in favor of the Reds. The day was a beautiful one, and the nines were the same as those of their recent game in New York, were the same as those of their recent game in New York, but the play was much inferior, as the Mutes were out of condition from having been on the road all night, and the Reds were careless on account of having an easy thing. There was quite a large attendance, including a good representation of ladies. A noteworthy event in this game was two home runs by Brainard, said to be the first he ever made against professional players. J. I. Lord, of the Indianapolis Club, having been selected for umpire, and the Mutes having lost the toss and gone to the bat, the game opened at 2.30 sharp.

THE GAME.

First Innings.—The Mutuals were disposed of rapidly, Hatfield, Eggler and Patterson being retired in order, each on a fair fly to Gould. On the other side there were four 1st bases credited to Gould, Waterman, H. Wright and Leonard, and three runs were scored, G. Wright, Dean and Brainard being the outs.

Score: 1 to 0 against New York.

2. The Mutes did little better in this inning's batting, E. Mills alone earning 1st base, Martin getting one bag by Sweasy's fault. C. Mills distinguished himself by striking out..... The Reds further increased their lead by four runs, McVey, G. Wright and Gould being scored with base hits, Higham muffed a fly neatly and Hatfield was shown to bed with a grounder.

3. The Mutes continued to bat badly, not a man reaching first in this innings..... The Reds did not improve their batting in succession flys from Brainard and Sweasy, the latter, probably, intentionally, as Brainard was forced off and fielded out at second. Sweasy tried to steal second and went out by Charley Mills' good throw. McVey also reached first by slow fielding by Higham, followed by a muff by E. Mills. However, not a run resulted from this melancholy muffinism, as Patterson handsomely took in a red hot liner from G. Wright's bat. Score, 7 to 0.

4. The Mutes went to the bat badly for variety, their 1st base hit a home run by E. Mills on a corker to right centre, Eggler having previously fouled out. Patterson safely reached first, and Nelson came out on the fly to H. Wright. Martin was then retired..... The Reds also added two to their total, by errors.

5. Another whitewash for New York, though Welters reached third on a very heavy crack to left field, which nothing but Leonard's fine throwing prevented from being a home run..... The Reds made four more in this innings, almost altogether on fielding errors, Martin, Higham and E. Mills each distinguishing themselves in this direction. McVey and Dean alone made clean hits. The score was now 13 to 7 in favor of the Reds and no longer excited any interest.

6. The Mutes's were again blanked, though Leonard muffed an easy fly of Nelson's, E. Mills, who batted elegantly throughout the game, alone making his first..... There was one more for the Reds —Ade's first "homer" on a heavy drive near the right field line. McVey hit a long liner to second, which gave promise of another, but Eggler galloped back and managed to claw it in. Score 13 to 2.

7. Charley Mills led off for the Yorkers by a three-base crack to right centre. Thus encouraged the Mutes woke up and succeeded in scoring three more. Higham earned a base and tallied, and Hatfield also scored, after having been called to first. Patterson made a clean hit, but was left..... This exhibition roused up the Cincinnatians, who, by a series of heavy, safe hits ran up eight runs. George Wright, Gould, Waterman, Dean and H. Wright made bases in succession before Leonard broke the charm by an out. Brainard was the unsuccessful party who tried "Homer-ing" at him, but Asa rather opened their eye by a magnificent drive to right centre, on which he reached the home plate. Eggler's fine fielding prevented another home run by Waterman, as it had done in the previous innings by McVey. The innings closed with the score 20 to 7.

In the eighth innings, and as it proved the last, each party added 2 to their scores, the game thus closing with a score of 22 to 7. Leonard distinguished himself in this innings by stealing from 1st to 2d base, third, and then to the home plate. It was now past five o'clock and nearly dark, so the game was called. The umpiring was impartial, and only defective in the usual mistaken leniency, in consequence of which, and the number of errors in fielding, the game was pronounced to a wearisome extent. We give the score:—

THE NEW JERSEY CHAMPIONSHIP.

ELIZABETH vs. NEWARK—THE RESOLUTES AND ACTIVES.

The Resolute Club, of Elizabeth, which closed the season of 1869 in possession of the championship of the state, started out this season with a strong nine, which included the two Campbells and Greathead from the Irvington Club, and with Farrow and others from the strong nines of New Jersey organizations. They opened play with a victory over the Elizabeth Atlantics early in May, but the week after they sustained a demoralizing defeat, at the hands of the champion Atlantics, by a score of 19 to 0. They then lost trophies to the Stars and Mutuals, but in their games with their own state clubs they were victorious until October, when the Amateurs, of Newark, polished them off in handsome style to the tune of 21 to 11, the Amateurs having placed themselves in the position of the most prominent of the state clubs, their victories being largely in excess of their defeats. Lately the Amateurs have won trophies from the Princeton College nine, and the Champions, of Jersey City, the Star and Cincinnati Clubs being alone among their conquerors, except the Resolutes in their first game, which was offset by an Amateur victory. Up to Nov. 1st the Resolutes had played 23 games, of which they had won 12 and lost 11. The following is the record of their victories this season up to Nov. 1st:—

1..May 4	—Resolute	Atlantic, of Elizabeth	8
2..June 1	—Resolute	17	Eckford, of Brooklyn	14

On Tuesday, Nov. 1st, the Resolutes took advantage of the fine weather which prevailed to play their return game with the Active Club, of Newark, an organization which numbers among its members Faitoute and Terrell, the former decidedly the most effective pitcher we know of in New Jersey. The game was played on the grounds of the Resolute Club, at Elizabeth, the field being located in an out of the way place, a mile from the depot and not near any city car route. The field, too, is rough, full of cart ruts and totally unfit for ball playing, unless between two mumn nines with a rubber ball. It might be made a good field, but it is not one at present. The Resolutes were short-handed, neither Farron, Forsyth or Greathead being present. The Actives, too, did not have their catcher, and, with a pitcher like Faitoute, a first class catcher is sine qua non. The attendance was numerous and respectable, several carriages with ladies being present, but the lack of the accommodation afforded at the Waverly grounds was a drawback. The umpire selected was impartial enough, but his incompetency in other respects was glaring, the pitchers and strikers being allowed to do as they liked as far as calling balls and strikes were concerned. The game opened with the Resolutes in the van by a score of 1 to 0, a dead red ball being used. In the next two innings, however, the Actives did all the run getting, the Resolutes drawing blanks. In the 4th and 5th innings the Resolutes managed to secure an addition to their score of 7 runs, chiefly by fielding errors, the Actives also running up the same number. This left the totals at 12 to 8 in favor of the Actives at the close of the 5th innings. In the 6th the Resolutes were beautifully whitewashed, Faitoute pluckily facing some very hot balls, and as the Actives scored 2 more, the game began to have a bad look for the Resolutes. In the 7th innings they added a run to their score and retired the Actives for a blank. By this time it had become too dark to play further and the game was called. The following is the score:—

STAR vs. HARVARD.

The return game of the series between the Stars, of Brooklyn, and the Harvards, of Boston, for the amateur championship, took place on the Jarvis Field, Cambridge, Mass., on Nov. 2d. The game was played in the presence of some two thousand spectators, a large number of whom were ladies. The Harvards, during their trip last summer, astonished their friends by winning some signal victories, and among them was that in which they defeated the Stars on their own grounds by a score of 12 to 6. For the game under notice Mr. Geo. H. Rogers, of the Lowells, was agreed upon as umpire. He was strict in keeping the pitchers down to their business, and at the end of the seventh innings, which was finished in an hour and a quarter, the score was nine to seven in favor of the Stars. The Harvards had been whitewashed in three successive innings, while the Stars had added but one tally to their score. In the eighth, Eustis and Wells disposed of the first two men. Worth was given his base on called balls and got his run, Rogers got to the second and Bass fouled out to Bush. The interest was now intense. Clyne caught Goodwin, White fouled to Hicks, Barnes made his base, but was left when White was caught by Dollard. Eight innings played, and the score 10 to 7 against Harvard, who had got four consecutive goose eggs. The ninth innings saw the Stars add another run to their score, the whitewash brush being applied to the Harvards again, and the game was ended with a score of 11 to 7 against the Harvards. The Stars were without the assistance of their regular pitcher Cummings, but the Harvards found the slow twisters of J. F. Rogers exceedingly hard to hit. The following is the score:—

RIOT AT NEW HAVEN.—In New Haven there is a law against playing base ball upon the "Green," which a score of Yale students were violating on the 31st ult., when a force of half a dozen policemen undertook to arrest them. Three or four of the students were in the hands of the officers when a cry of "Yale!" "Yale!" rang out. In a few seconds over 200 students were upon the ground, and then followed no gentle melee. The friends of those arrested pitched in and tried to drag their friends from the hands of the police. Those arrested struggled to get free, and in the general turmoil one student was knocked senseless by being struck on the head by a policeman. A crowd of over 500 people gathered around and the riot lasted about half an hour, when the police force got the best of the students and succeeded in arresting five. The others dispersed.

THE SOUTHERN CHAMPIONSHIP.—The third and concluding game for the championship of the south, between the R. E. Lee and Lone Star clubs, took place at the Park, New Orleans, on Oct. 30th, and resulted in the Lees capturing their opponents by the following score by innings:—

THE RING.

ALLEN AND GALLAGHER.

THE FIGHT PREVENTED BY THE POLICE.

ANOTHER DAY SET APART.

The strong arm of the law having been interposed to upset the calculations of the managers of the projected fistic meeting between Tom Allen and James Gallagher, near St. Louis on the 1st inst., we are unable to lay before our readers an account of the mill this week. However, arrangements have been made for a settlement upon other ground than that originally selected, and there is a probability that it will be "eventuate" on this (Tuesday) morning, Nov. 8th, on the soil of bleeding Kansas. The circumstances producing the result are as follows:—Shortly after 9 o'clock A. M. on the 1st, Allen, in company with Jack Madden, walked aboard the steamer Belle Ida, which had been chartered for the excursion, and shook hands with their friends as they retired to their state room. Preparations were in progress for hauling off when Captain Burgess and six patrolmen boarded the steamer and took Tom into custody. He was marched to the Central station and placed in confinement. Bail was offered in any amount but refused. Then a writ of habeas corpus was served upon the chief of police, returnable forthwith. He refused to produce the said body immediately, claiming twenty-four hours' time to return an answer, but an affidavit was secured stating that Allen was about to be spirited away, and an attachment was served upon McDonough, requiring him to appear before the judge of the Court of Criminal Correction and answer to the demand of the writ. The result was that Allen was at once surrendered in compliance with the directions of the writ. Leaving the court room he, in company with Roach and Jack Looney, jumped into a hack and were driven rapidly to the boat, but owing to the lateness of the hour, which rendered it impossible to reach the ground within the time specified in the articles, the steamer did not start. Gallagher left St. Louis as an early hour by rail, arriving at Carondolet at 9.30, where he proposed to await the coming of the boat, secreting himself in an out of the way house in the interim. He was ferreted out by a member of the locust brigade, however, and shortly after eleven o'clock was taken into custody and conducted to the sub-station, subject to orders from headquarters. A dispatch was sent by the chief of police authorizing his transfer immediately to the Central station, St. Louis, where he arrived about 1 o'clock, and, after a short confinement, was released, no charge having been preferred against him. He stated that under no circumstances would he sanction a withdrawal of the stakes without a fight. That if a meeting could be gotten up within fifty miles of St. Louis, without magisterial interference, and barring any interest or concern in excursion money, he would consent to it, but he preferred fighting in Kansas, where no police could enter. In regard to his reported sickness, he stated that he was confined for three days, but it did not materially affect his condition, and that he never felt better in his life than on yesterday. He felt able to fight anybody. The selection of his training quarters at the Fairfield house he considered unfortunate, because adjacent to it were several ponds of water which endangered intermittent fever, and on which he was a mild sufferer. As above stated, an agreement was subsequently entered into to fight on the 8th in Kansas.

Barney Aaron was custodian of the excursion money, and shortly after Allen's arrrest a policeman attempted to seize upon the person of Barney as he was walking along the wharf, near the boat. The "Star of the East" was too quick for him, however, and, bounding away, he boarded the steamer, pursued by the man in blue. The chase becoming rather warm, with a prospect of Barney being ultimately cornered, he took to the water, preferring to saturate his fine linen to falling into the clutches of the law. He managed to get into an unoccupied skiff, and, pulling across the stream, reached the Illinois shore, laughing at the discomfited beak. Out of this escapade arose an emeute between Billy Ryder and Jack Looney during the evening, at a saloon in the Mound City, where a large delegation of the element were assembled, discussing the fizzle over sundry and divers exhilarating concoctions. It was charged by Ryder that Barney had "skipped" for good with the proceeds accruing from the sale of tickets, amounting to some $500, intimating also that there was collusion between him and Jack. One word brought on another until blows were exchanged and the affair speedily developed into a general row, during which tumblers and bottles were freely used. The producing of a revolver by Ryder had the effect of quieting matters somewhat, and, a squad of police arriving upon the scene, the entire party were conveyed to the central station, where Jack Looney and another became engaged in a rough and tumble.

BRUMMAGEM LADS ON THE BOX.—TIMMINS MAKES KETTLE SING ENOUGH, AND CASSIDY INCREASES PAYNE'S PAINS.—Two scraps took place in the Birmingham district, Eng., on Oct. 17th. The first was between Harry Timmins, alias Steadman, and Bob Kettle, catch-weight, the latter staking £12 to £10. The competitors had but a few days' training, consequently were in anything but proper form. They were well seconded, and there was no long display or capering round the ring, but as soon as the men were loosed they went at it, and a slashing mill ensued. Timmins drew first blood from Bob's nasal organ in the second round. In the third round Kettle got first knock-down blow. Timmins in the fourth planted a hot one on the right ogle of Kettle, laying it open. The fifth was a rattling round, Timmins again forcing the fighting, and landing heavily on the right temple. Both came up quickly in each round to the call of "Time" but it was evident that Kettle had but little chance with his more active opponent, although he showed the greatest gameness, and received the lion's share of the punishment. His friends at the eighth round wished to withdraw him, but he refused, and came up for the 10th round, when he fell from sheer exhaustion and want of condition. Timmins was therefore hailed the winner, after contending 35 minutes. From the fourth round 2 to 1 was freely laid on Timmins. A well known sporting gentleman officiated as referee. Kettle's friends, not being satisfied with his defeat, offer to make another match to fight at catch-weight, allowing a reasonable time for training, for £15, £20, or £25 a side. The second mill was between Mick Cassidy and Jack Payne, for £10, catch-weight, Payne standing 5ft. 6in., and weighing about 10st. 7lb.; his opponent's height being only 5ft. 5¾in., and his weight 8st. The betting was 6 to 4 on Payne. The Brothers Welsh handled their countryman, while two well known Birmingham pugs did the needful for Payne. No time was cut to waste, and at 9.20 the men stood up for the fight. Round 1. Payne led off with his left on the dial, Mick returning slightly on the conk; a good rally, and both went down together. 2. Payne again led off, but was out of reach, Mick landing on the left ogle. Payne returned a swinging right-hander, and caught Mick a rattler on the left ear, sending him quickly to grass. 3. Payne was first up, and led with his left, which again fell short, Mick landing a hot-un on the left ogle, which riled Payne, who rushed in, but only to catch a tremendous cross-counter with such effect as to break his nasal organ, and send him to grass all of a heap. 4. Mick was first up, and at once set about his man viciously, fighting him all over the ring, Payne getting down to avoid further punishment. 5. Mick again commenced operations, and taking a steady lead, any odds were offered on him. After a few exchanges Payne fell from weakness and loss of blood. 6. Mick looked as fresh as at the commencement, while Payne fell giddy and the claret was flowing from the nasal organ like a tap. Payne tried with his left without effect, and received a rattler on the left jaw, which sent him to Mother Earth, and the affair was as good as over. 7 to 15 and last. Mickey had it pretty well all his own way, and at the call of time in the fifteenth round, Payne held out his hand and refused to fight any longer. Time, 43min. Cassidy had hardly a mark.

READ THIS.—A reporter of prize fights has invented a new method of taking notes, which he intends to have patented. He draws the full figure of his men on a sheet of white paper and records the various blows given in the different rounds by blue and red pencil dots—a red dot on the "sunflusher" to signify that the claret has been made to flow from that organ, and a blue dot on the "peeper" to mean that an opening has been banged up, and so on.

BILLIARDS.

C. DION vs. THE MASSACHUSETTS CHAMPION.

TWO REMARKABLE GAMES.—THE FAVORITE DEFEATED.—THE WINNER'S AVERAGES AS GOOD AS THE LOSER'S BEST RUNS.

Billiardistically, the glory of Agawam, perhaps better known now-a-days as Springfield, Mass., has, for a time at least, departed. Perhaps seeing results near, E. Frank Dennison has been achieving victory upon victory, and, as a natural result, the tribe of Agawam have been putting much money in their purses. As an opening wedge, Dennison, whom mesropolitan defeats had sent into bucolic retirement away up the Connecticut river, captured the champion one of Massachusetts from R. B. Wilmarth. For the same prize he afterwards defeated William A. Tompkins, ex-champion of the Bay State. We next hear of him, narrated by George Stone, taking the two Dions into camp, as the consequence of a four-handed game of 1,000 points, for a well filled purse. This unexpected triumph (chiefly due, however, to the looseness of the cloth upon the table) just set Springfield wild. Dennison could be matched to play anybody, either with proper odds or without odds of any kind or degree. He next played and defeated young George Slosson, to whom he gave the odds of 300 to 1,000. In the first game, not knowing his man, his play was cramped and he averaged but 30. In the second, having measured his man thoroughly and now knowing him well, he gave a loose rein (or, as we say in billiards, "set himself out") and the upshot was that he averaged 74, and Slosson was forced to depart for that rather uncertain spot "where the woodbine twineth." That average of 74 was altogether too much for the equanimity of the tribe of Agawams, who had benefited muchly from Dennison's victories in the short space of ten months, and which victories included other games than those here adverted to. Elated over their successes, the Springfield braves made a mistake that had often been made before, and had as often broken the hearts of some young and promising players. They negotiated for a match between Dennison and an "old hand at the bellows," a player who had won about thirty matches and lost but three, who many years ago defeated more skilful players than Dennison, and who, five years ago, made by long odds the best average then recorded of the very game now selected, viz., push shots barred. Moreover, the Springfield "big injuns," asking merely the odds of 250 in 1,000, matched Dennison, a "young 'un," with no decided reputation for nerve or readiness against one who, as a money-player, has no equal, unless it be Frank Parker. The unimpressibility of this left handed, bald-headed chap, Cyrille Dion, was a complete offset to the odds of 250 he was called upon to give. In one sense and to most players this would have been a hard matter. Being a short game of 1,000 points, had Dennison, as he was liable to do on a carom table, started off early with a run of 250, the result would have been the defeat of most antagonists. Against Cyrille Dion that lead of 500 would scarcely have told much, however. A player who, when his money is up, never sees anything but the balls on the table—who, when about to make a shot, would be all unconscious even of the presence of a platoon of soldiers with loaded muskets aimed at his key head—is not one to be easily frightened. Were it not for the calls of the marker Cyrille would selfishly let the game run on and on, and when he hears the marker announce that he is behind, he is not the man to sit down and speculate as to his chances of being beaten. He is decidedly an optimist, hoping always for something beneficent to turn up and reasoning from almost any standpoint, when others despair that he has "got the best of it." He accepts the situation without a murmur—takes the worst that can come to him and strives cheerfully to make the best of it. No one ever heard him complain of bad luck, and the most disheartening contretemps to which the billiard match player is amenable causes no change in his features. It appears to be all the same to him whether he counts and plays on; or whether, after a count, his ball tumbles into some convenient pocket; and, should his antagonist make a startling scratch, he may possibly raise his eyes towards the ceiling, as if opining what would have been his chances but for the disaster; but no sigh or groan, or other sign of discomfiture will escape him. It was against such a man, who seems incapable of comprehending that he is being beaten, who plays intuitively, or apparently much more with his hand than his head, who has overscored the great Rudolphe by upwards of 400 points in the two public matches they have played together, and who is the billiard match player par excellence of the future. It was against this player, who, in proportion to his losings, has, besides, won more matches than any other expert in this country, that the comparatively inexperienced Dennison was pitted.

All these considerations were put aside, however, and undue weight given to two other facts, viz.: that Dennison was getting one-fourth of the game to start with, and that he had himself averaged 74 in a match on the same terms as this. It was altogether overlooked that Dennison did not make that average until, having measured his opponent's cue, he had discovered that he could run even with him. It was the same with Cyrille. Not knowing anything about his opponent's strength, except that he was a good nurser, Cyrille made of the first a game of long caroms—doing scarcely any nursings, in order that, should he himself slip up, his antagonist would find his balls scattered. Therefore, until he had acquired a greater lead than he needed points to win, he actually made no legitimate run above 99, his 171 resulting from a scratch at 99. His average in the first game was but 52. Aware that he could trust the balls to roll almost anywhere, in the second game he launched forth, playing the ivories for all they were worth. The result was, the unparalleled average of 132—an average seventy points greater than his opponent's best run. The contest took place in a small room over Mattie Hewins' Billiard Hall, Hartford, Conn., on the evening of Thursday, November 3d. There was an attendance of about 200, and so orderly a concourse we have seldom seen—certainly never at a match in which the favorite was being beaten. The arrangements, which had been entrusted to the discreet hands of Mr. Hewins, were, in every respect, as excellent as the limited capacity of the room admitted. Environed by raised seats was a 5½x11 Standard American carom table. It was 8.16 when the players were ready to begin. The betting was altogether in favor of Dennison, and heaps of money might have been won had Dion been accompanied by a delegation from Gotham. Springfield, as enthusiastic as wonted, and liberal to a fault, was out in strong force with its money, but New York was not represented, and Hartford itself was inclined, so far as wagers went, to be a trifle Dennisonian. A number of small pools at $10 to $8 and $9 were sold; but that constituted the sole betting at the start. Among the larger bets which found no takers were $100 to $80 on Dennison, $30 against $100 that he would make the largest run, and $40 agains: $100 that he would win independently of his odds. Subsequently a wager of $50 against $100 was made on the latter point.

THE FIRST GAME.

Dennison won the lead. Cyrille counted and ran 18. Dennison counted 6, 9 and 9 in the third inning, scoring the third with a miserable shot. At the end of the fifth innings he was almost caught by Cyrille, who, in attempting to add to a run of 93, slopped up on an easy draw. Even at this early stage Dennison seemed to be extremely nervous; his hand unsteady and his judgment defective. Thus he missed an easy "bank" by about three inches, and fizzled on a "draw" that was easy enough, but which at another time he would probably not have attempted, as it was not calculated to better his position as the ball having to be struck with too much force. Dion, on the other hand, though he too "fizzled" on two draw shots, was hitting them all over the board. As a player of cushion shots Dion has long stood as preeminent as does that as John W. Gough as a match cushion caroms as he made that night were never before seen in a match. No matter where the second ball was, Dion had but to aim at the first, give the cue ball a thrust, and down would come the latter plump upon the one to be caromed upon. There was none of this "just hitting 'em" about those shots. When he struck the second ball he hit it full, with that deadly certainty which has made him famous, also as a player of pin pool, which game, for accuracy, is the most exacting of all. After the 12th innings, $100 to $5 would have found few takers. Thenceforward the game proved a walk-away and almost devoid of interest. Dennison became unlucky, as men at billiards always do when, playing below themselves, stand in wait for fortune to help them. The score will show just what chance he had to win after the first half dozen innings or so:—

Songs for the People.

THE GIRL WITH THE CIGARETTE.

SONG AND DANCE.

The Park was crowded; on the Mall
Sweet girls passed to and fro;
The band was playing some sweet waltz,
While others murmured low.
My eyes fell on a pretty blonde,
Linked with a dark brunette,
And in her fairy hand she held
A tiny cigarette.

Chorus.—There was not another on the Mall
Could beat her stylish dash,
And I felt my heart bob up and down
When I ceased to see her sash.
I'd given the world to link my arm
As did the girl in buff,
And whisper sweetness in her ear,
While she would list and puff.

But she merely glanced upon me,
Then touched her ruby lips,
And held the dainty little weed
Between her finger tips.
Then, lifting up her snowy skirt,
She pursed her mouth, but yet,
It was not all, because it was
To puff her cigarette.

Chorus.—There was not another on the Mall, etc.

I watched her all that afternoon
Until the night sounds broke;
Was dreaming of that pretty face
That peered from out the smoke.
I may never see my blonde again,
But still I'll not forget
Her lovely smile, and charming way
She smoked that cigarette.

Chorus.—There was not another on the Mall, etc.

QUID NUNC.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Nov. 7, '70.

DEAR FRIENDS, we are on the eve of an important political struggle which ought to shake the world from centre to circumference, regulated, as it is, by the antagonistic parties of this great and glorious American metropolis. We are pretty well rugged out to-day, having been occupied every evening the past week, as well as at Wednesday and Saturday's matinees, in speaking for the Democrats and Republicans; for, be it known, in a crisis like that we are now passing through, we give our services freely to politicians of every complexion, knowing nothing but the right. Even as we write, messengers are coming from every political organization in the city to seek our advice upon not only the great State questions, but upon all the local issues that flesh is heir to. There is but one day left in which to work out the important problem of the time. Shall we sit here like an incubus while the palladium of our liberties is in danger? No, foul be the tongue that would quiet keep when danger threatens, and palsied be the hand that will not strike when disastrous foemen brave the field. 'Jimmy, you will have to go on with this stump speech, while we run up to see Hoffman and Woodford. Mind, be careful what you say—don't commit the CLIPPER to either side, but steer nicely among them all, just as our Broadway stage drivers navigate that crowded the roughfare without as much as soiling the paint on their wheels. You understand n ow?" "I'm fly—don't hav no feer of me—I haint been among sho fokes all me dase not to no how to wark the rope without fallin' orf I bet yer." "Be fearless, and strike like a two headed hydra—say what you can on local events without treading on the favorite corns of the people. Can I trust you?" "As a unborn babe." "Farewell, then, till after election." "Adux, and manny happee returns of the day."

THE BOSS'S STUMP SPEECH.

BY OUR JIM.

Frens of me yooth, and yu, me bully wurkers and woters in a good caus, pors and reflеck ere yu carst yure forchunes on to the commin platforms of the day. Wat air we a wotin for? Ah, ha! there's the rub, as Mr. Hamlich fulishly exklames. Wat hav we got to do with old Troches and Beureen, and Dambeat? There's the queskshin, me frens. Isn't Jon Hoffman as good a man as Mister Woodford, an wice werser, probly? Then, wred these exuberesnuss of anmill pashins. No, sir, nevver, and this here I will maneise to me born dase. A nuther thing wich is tgstin the publik mine is this here—the cornjuicesive to peepil's helth, to stand in the opin strotes at nite gasin at roarer borellises wen thare families ma be a starwin at home for the nessisaxres of life, wich is now so previint as a menes of diwershin and sientifick studdees of hevenly spears. But let ori that thare pais, I hav not wun word to sa agin them than I hav agin the big fulin at Tammy hall. The wa. is this digressins ofcourse to yu, me dearyrid sunkins, I hav bene sade that I'm in faver of the heethen Chinee. This is a li of the fust worter—I disgust him like I doo a wiper and tharebi hangs a tail. Wen the nu york herreld kild the Dutch armee bee Parris, and sent em a kitin like a kloodi with his tales atweene his legs, diddent the Frensh and Irish ressidints tender Mister Bennitt the fredim of the sitty for his kinesing in opsin hiss mouf to trade, if it was a bloked wich dun it? Wat ses the yuneewersal poet, ses he:

"Trooth krusht to erth will rise agin."

But a troos tu this; me withers is unrung, I hav no doubt. But wat I wud cori yure attenshun to is this here: if a unregisted purson temps to wote more'n five times in wun electrick, shute dei on to the spot, for such pursons clothes isn't wurth the papur they're written on to, an this ole stick tu like a pot of glu. But this here ain't the ony kase wich cums tu me nolidig, wich yu shill heer. Wen Liddy Tompeon returad from her tower Boss Twede calld upon her late at nite to arsk wud she expouse the caus of the pepli in this sthcuming fite. An, how like her wus her reply. With her hans restin into her trousis pokits, as is her wontness, and her ise a rolin at the hed of the department of publick wux, she ses, ses she, as her pepers shun like puris of grate price, as thus she ses:

"I'me tired an' I'me sleepy tu,
Put me in me littil bed."

Tork about yer sparrin wimmim, and yer amersins, and yure Jones of Arkses—wi thayre dam frorda kompaird with this here walgrunt spessimin of the 9teenth senchury. Not ony this, but bakalyders has sed the ony parties to be consed to the ise kornsumers sosielty—wich is anuther wikkid and foris lie made out of hole kloth; no, me frens, we go in tuthe and tonale for this here seducktiv asoshiashin, an' wen I sa our side kornsumed more ise larst summer than the hole of the opposishin fackshin, how chepe must these here blame bakbiters seme tu a honist communtee of ise kornsumers. So much for Dawn. Som of the dissatisfide old klams of the ennermy ses that this haint no free gavvment. Fur wi? I disgorge sich meneness, I do. How much frear do they want her, I'de like tu no? Don't we let em stele an kil and use the ballit boxes like tha was privit propertee? Sum pepli haint never sattiafide—it wussint ony a fu years ago that they cride out for a lo bridge to cross broadwa a frete; tha got it, then tha got tired of it like a infant tires of its first toy; tha tear it down like a cucumber of the ground, and now theyre a down like a cucumber of the ground, and now theyre a down like a cucumber of the ground, and now theyre a klammerin for a high bridge to cart em over to Bruklin; tha put me in mine of a fillyit paryent hoom was braggin about her orfspring having had every diseees but konsumpshin, and she wanted him to ketch that so as he wud be dun with em, like a boy hoom jumps into the warter all at wonst so as to be out of his panes, so to speke; well, he got the kunsumpshin, an that endid him—he got out of his panes an out of the wurld without no furtner trubble, an now that little bud is a bloomin in a soopertor flowerpot, as it ware.

But to ressom—menny of our second fammerries has sent me a perlite invitashin, by "unlwursal reqwest," to favor 'em with mi leckshер on "Wat I no about Piten." I want ori sich kangroos to no that I kepe mi nodlidg on them pints to meself, dam 'em; I don't 'low no man to brow beat me. Horris Greley started this here hole thing wen he rit his book on farmin'. Wat do I keer for him or his farmin? Let him ho his own ro, and I'le tend to the ded betes—so much for that thare. Gentlemen, a good lele has bin sed about nigger superwisers and similar fak kaikters, an' I'me arakt am I in faver of sich nu fangfid noshins. Mi frens, yu hav ori hurd the story about the ten wirgins, haven't you? 5 of 'em was wise and 5 of 'em wassen't; well, them's mi sentyments igsackly; I go in for the nigger superwisers, or marshals, or watever dam name yu chuse to cori 'em, jist so long as tha wote with our party, and I don't care hoom nose it, nuther; I don't 'low no shernannaggin with me, now mind—so much for the superwisers, or otherwisers, if I ma make so boldness as to joke upon a subjeck like those. Sum fokes fork about playin soljers on tu us on leashun day, to intimmerdate the fre and librll woters of a unbort ballad box. An the forgit that we kin pla soljers, too; let 'em send all the forgit that we kin pla soljers, too; let 'em send all the soljers that ever wunk—havvent we Jim Fisk and his warryers of the 9th? Hoom wud mo 'em down like the du of the morn. Not ony this, my feller sittisens, but the weeky parade ground as we is in the short, and bites in me wanes like a krusenbit. Mister Becher—hoos puse sells like hot kakes since then—deklares that the old stile of hel fire is piade out, wich is importint if tru, and bines that puss precher to his flok in bonds stronger than ever; an' yit, Weems Jobson dodges this here grate trooth, an', Jorge Fox skips it bi like Guy. Hofmin skipt bi the houses wen his horses got awa with him up on the avnoo tother da, wich it was a miracklens scape from instant deth, perwided he hadn't jumpt the waggin, in a manner spekin. An' wot ses Estpe Fabis on this topick:—

"Twert better tu hav jumpt an lorst
Than nevver su hav jumpt at all."

Is the nashin in its deth throse that we must go ruff shod thru the wilderniss, and see no evil? Hoom is Doctor Lookup, and hoom did he look up but frale crechers to practise his aborshinesses upon, an' make wa with 'em at ten dollars a weke, an no quesehins arskt. At the pieese to blame for yankin' this otroshianess of a fumigated monster? Ar the coruner to waist his sweetenss on the dessert air vile such infant killers enrich thare farms with humin manoor prepaired at the Doctor's horseptital in Chatsam strete. Let the pepli wote darn all such assassinators, and consine the monsters to a livin toomb. Annek Jans and her hole projinx is a wirganil violent kompaird to this ole hollyhock of a figishin. Ecksy sqvim—ge tu. An yit brefe as is the distins wich spans the spase betwext the nu kort hous and the nu post offis, az no man liveth hoom saw the beginnin of the wun, so haint thare no infant goin' thru his sirrup of squils as will ever see the finaish of the uther, for, as Mister Watts his name ses, sis he:

"Woom the gods luv tha fust make mad."

And yit thare is condishins when a man forgits his cunning, as yu will perseeve, an gose dri shod rite over the pepli; if a purson hoos skoolin is a littel off color kin git five dollars for registin wonst, is that thare poor but honest purson to be jugged with impunily corn se tries to earn a fu honist dollars no more truibbel than swairn to a dam lie? Now is he? Mi feller sittisins, "You no how it is yourself." Wen Wilyim Burch, esquire, fust tuk the stump in behaff of bibel or no bibel in the publick skools, he struk the ke note of a holey ackshin wich shill make his name famus warever the burch rools as a rod of ion, and so sa we ori. Mi unfinisht and dilooted feller voters, this haint no time for flin amung yureselves—wen Jannerschauk cum over here, she didn't cum to make munney, but to lern Amerykin actresses how to spack Inglish, but it ceased for that. Niblo's taken in orl the munney that the troothful telygraf ses she is—no sur, it is dun to cram the pepil, and every fi tha teilegraf about her costs 'em jest so much pur word. Air theese the sort of fokes yer wood send to kongriss, ware trooth is so nitty it is alwase prewalin? Air it? Besides, air not the weltby residents of this yer metropiis entitled in a payrade ground as well as Brother Bill? Do you wane? Air we livin skeletons for nuthin'? Yit we air told that no gentilman or lady wud arsk the privvylidg of keping a pe-nut stand on the publick stretes wen tha no it is agin the lor. In the konaise wurds of our deer bruther Chapin:—

The cat will mu, the mise wil pla,
An' every dog wil hav his da.

But it is time I was bringin' this orashin to a close, for I hav many places ware it must be deliverd ere the chikkens go out thare mordiencli. Yes, mi deer frens, wen the brite effuvium of a risin sun shil shed his beems on the ungarbeld hirogeeneuseess of a obliterated thoseotipe, an the irrefragibal refrackshisness of a ire dinasty shil bare aloft the callisniss of a primitiv ideal; wen the Katamarans of a sooeyzdial konglomerashin of hybrids shil sore beyond the impirean hites of a holykaust of nashins yit unborn; wen the big and little lights of Tammany mount, like Theseeddees of old, and brake the bars of deth; wen Russil Yung an Charley Danna shill lie down together, and smoak a pipe a peese; wen the rumblin erth and the vorters thereon shil permeate and amalgamate til kaos shil be no moar; then, me beluved and antedeloovyan remnants of parst ages, ma we luk for it, but not til then, fur how trooly does the immackulate poet reflеck our thorts, wen he says, as he:—

Se yander bakin lits a blazin in the sky—
Let me ask yu, feller sittysins, "how is that for hi?"
Se, in, that prood egilori a salin in the air,
If there was another with him, then there'd be a pair;
Se each corner on eleckshin da, se them box ori made of wood,
Them's the palladeum of our libberties—at least, so it's understood,
For out of them thare boxes, whare the weery is at rest,
The chaps inside dei lickets, an' the dei thare put in best—
Thre dollars a pese and lunch thrown in is wot them parties gits,
Likewise the opositshin knox 'em down and gives 'em fits.
But a troos, a troos, me honest frens, my enneregess is expendid,
An with this closin line of mine, the boss's speeche is ended.

City Summary.

J. G. FORDE, an English monological artist, made his first appearance in this city at the Globe Theatre on Monday evening, Oct. 31st. The entertainment consists of a brief comic dissertation, concluding with one verse of a song appropriate to the subject under discussion. During the week "Matrimony" and "Sailors and the Sea" were the topics which formed the thread upon which were strung pearls of thought. Mr. Forde possesses a good presence; an easy, graceful carriage; has a clear, resonant voice and a good delivery. Gifted with a keen appreciation of wit and humor, he makes his entertainment thoroughly enjoyable, and he has been the recipient of several encores nightly. Mr. Josh Hart made his first appearance, after an absence from the metropolitan boards of some two years, upon the above date, in the character of Peanut Piecrust in the "Nymphs of the Caribbean Sea," a burlesque consisting of three scenes. In the delineation of the stage Yankee, Mr. Hart was peculiarly happy and kept the audience in the best of spirits. Mr. John Ila's as Duffy Cowheel and Add Ryman as Peter Wildgoose, an Eng lish tourist, by their excellent acting added much to the hilarity of the occasion. Mr. H. Milburn, of whose performances at another theatre we had occasion in our past issue to highly commend, commenced a brief engagement at this theatre on the above date. He has sung the same songs as last week and has been most enthusiastically applauded. Master Barney has danced an excelsior jig during the week, which has been well received. Andy Leon, in his comic version song and dance, has been a prominent feature. Miss Martha Wren and Mr. James Collins have continued to appear in "Barney's Courtship," and the other members of the company in their various specialties have acquitted themselves to the satisfaction of the audiences, which, in point of numbers during the week may be classed as good.

MLLE. ELISE PERSINI, prima donna soprano, made her debut in opera bouffe at the Grand Opera House on Monday evening, Oct. 31st, in the character of Marguerite in "Le Petit Faust," which she sang and acted with commendable taste and spirit. This lady is the third prima donna who has sung this character since the co mencement of the operatic season, and we think the most successfully. She is petite in figure, has an intellectual, expressive countenance, and her acting is impregnated with a high degree of mercuriality. Her voice is powerful, and possesses the charm of freshness in a greater degree than either of the other prima donnas of the troupe. Having already commented upon the balance of the cast, we have nothing to add save that Lea Silly appears to better advantage in Mephisto than in any character she has yet enacted. This opera was repeated on Wednesday and Friday evenings. On Tuesday and Thursday evenings, also on the Saturday matinee, "Orfanella Gregeois" was repeated, with Mlle. Celine Montaland in the role of the Duchess, and on Saturday evening Mlle. Lea Silly acted the same role in the same opera. The political excitement has interfered with the attendance here during the past week.

"UNE SOIREE MUSICALE" was given at the private residence of Mrs. Dr. Geo. W. Brooks, No. 38 West Thirty-second street, on the evening of the 2d inst., in aid of wounded French soldiers, at which a select and fashionable assembly of nearly five hundred ladies and gentlemen were attracted to listen to the sweet sounds emitted by Madame de Lussan, Miss Jenny Kempton, Dr. Valentine and Messrs. Geo. S. Weeks, G. S. Hall, H. Millard, F. N. Patterson and B. Mollenhaur, conducted by Sig. A. Barili. Full gratification was generally expressed at the harmony of the occasion in every sense of the term. The programme exhibited refined taste in selection and the execution was pronounced admirable.

MISS ROSA CHILLAG arrived in this city recently, and will shortly appear in concert under the direction of Mr. De Vivo. She has an excellent reputation upon the continent and is said to excel in such parts as Norma, Lucrezia Borgia, Fides, &c. She made her debut in Vienna in 1850. Her voice is a mezzo soprano sfogato.

FELIX ROGERS, who recently created a favorable impression by his performance of Quilp, at Niblo's Garden, has been engaged at that theatre to play Greppo in the "Black Crook" upon its revival, we are informed.

BEN MAGINLEY and wife, who have been the past season with Bailey's Circus, arrived in town last week. As Ben is a comedian of no mean ability we hope to see him upon the boards of some of our city theatres during the winter.

MISS CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN, the celebrated actress, arrived in this city from England on Nov. 3d, by the steamer Scotia. For some years past she has been suffering from cancer, and her case, by the most eminent continental physicians, has been pronounced hopeless. She came to this country in defiance of their express orders to end her days in her native land. She is stopping with some personal friends. The critic of the Herald, upon her arrival, immediately announced that she would shortly appear at Booth's Theatre, as Meg Merrilies, which is, of course, erroneous.

MR. CLIFTON W. TAYLEURE has secured T. C. De Leon's dramatization of "Edwin Drood," which made a decided hit in Chicago, Ill., where it was recently produced at McVicker's Theatre, with Mr. Lawrence Barrett in the character of Jasper the opium eater. Mr. Tayleure will, probably, produce it shortly at one of our city theatres.

THE LAURI FAMILY, ballet and pantomime artists, who have been highly spoken of by the press, are prepared to accept engagements and can be addressed as per advertisement.

AT THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS "In a Fix" and the "Wig Makers" were produced during the past week, which were provocative of much laughter. "Let Me Be" continues popular, and Johnny Queen and Billy West are adding to their reputation by the performance of it. In the first part D. S. Wambold sang "Don't be Angry With Me, Darling," very sweetly; Charley Backus humorously sang "Rolling Home in the Morning, Boys." W. Bernard as the interlocutor was as dignified and clever as usual, and Billy Birch sang a comic refrain called "Old Grimes' Cellar Door." Fair business attends the performances of this company.

SIDNEY FRANKS, a comic singer of sound merit, has been the chief novelty at the Theatre Comique during the past week, where he proved a favorite. The Goodman Brothers, from the Cambridge Music Hall, England, also appeared for the first time; but did not make a very great impression. James F. Wambold made a great hit in a banjo solo and song called "Cackle, Cackle," which was rapturously applauded, and gained three or four encores. W. Arlington, an excellent comedian, delivered a stump speech and danced the "Essence of Old Virginny," in which he is unexcelled. Charley White, the veteran comedian, and J. C. Stewart appeared in a sketch called "Black Stupidity," which was very humorously acted. Lew Rattler, Pankhurst and Collins, and James Maas appeared in their various specialties. Miles Venturoli and Augusta appeared in the "Demon Ballet," and Charley Abbott's pantomime of "Hanky Panky" concluded the performance. The band at this theatre, under the leadership of David Braham, is deserving of high commendation. The selections of music are excellent and well performed. The fresh attractions for the present week are the Siegrist Family, consisting of Francois Siegrist, and his two sons, Lewis and Tommy, who will appear in classic groupings and parlor gymnastic feats; Signor Collini, who will appear as the harlequin in the pantomime, and Miss Bessie Sudlow, who will sing semi-comic songs.

CHARLES PETERS, a popular comedian, died in this city at his residence at the corner of 53d street and 3d avenue on Wednesday, Nov. 2d, of consumption, at the age of 45 years and nearly 7 months, he having been born in April 15th, 1825, at Birmingham, Eng. He arrived in America in 1849, and made his first appearance at Niblo's Garden, in this city, in the summer of 1850. Shortly after this he visited Boston, Mass., and appeared at the Federal Street Theatre, then called the Boston Theatre, under the management of Charles R. Thorne, in conjunction with the Monplaiser ballet troupe. At the conclusion of his engagement here he went west, where he remained in various companies during three seasons, returning to New York in 1854, where he was engaged at Wallack's Theatre. Laura Keene, perceiving in him peculiar comic abilities which only wanted opportunity for proper development, engaged him, and so great was the sympathetic professional feeling that existed between these artists, that Mr. Peters remained in her employ some ten years. His first great hit was made at Laura Keene's Theatre—now the Olympic—by his very quaint and artistic performance of Binney, in "Our American Cousin," a small part, which he elevated to that degree that it became equally prominent with Dundreary, Asa Trenchard, or Florence. When the spectacular hodge-podge entitled the "Seven Sisters" was produced at this theatre, Mr. Peters conceived the idea of introducing a burlesque upon the ballet, and he became the central figure de the scene. Being of obese figure, he selected its direct antithesis for illustration, that of Cupid, and when he bounded on the mimic scene, clad in the costume of a figurante, with wings and very short skirts, the merriment he created was intense; having a professional knowledge of dancing, he was enabled to present an artistic burlesque which did not descend into vulgarity. He made a great hit in this original creation of his brain, which added materially to the success of the piece, and his performance became the talk of the town during the extraordinary run of the play, which lasted about one year. In 1864 Mr. Wm. Warren, having decided to leave the Boston Museum, in Boston, to star through the country, Mr. Peters was engaged to fill his place. In the early fall of that year, about Oct. 4th, being on a temporary visit to this city, he met with a serious accident upon the Third avenue railroad, which almost incapacitated him from pursuing his profession thereafter. His long illness wasted the savings of years, which his brother actors learning, they tendered him a benefit, which took place at the Academy of Music, Dec. 8th, 1864, which netted a handsome sum, it being reported as much as $4,000. Since that time he has appeared before the public but seldom, and then for very brief engagements. When "Hamlet" was produced at Booth's Theatre on Jan. 5th, 1870, Mr. Peters was engaged to play the grave digger, but being afflicted with rheumatism he was compelled to absent himself for some nights from the theatre during the run of the piece. On one of these occasions Mr. W. S. Andrews, an actor at present retired from the profession, generously played his part, and handed Mr. Peters the salary. Mr. Peters was married in 1854 to Eliza Nickenson, the daughter of John Nickenson. Mr. Peters' last appearance on the stage was at Booth's Theatre, March 19th, 1870, in the character of the grave digger in "Hamlet." He was a warm hearted, genial companion, a sincere friend, a affectionate husband, and his demise will be mourned by a large circle of sympathizing friends. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from St. Mark's Church, and was largely attended.

THE GRAND ENGLISH OPERA COMBINATION sang the following operas during the past week at Niblo's Garden:—The "Rose of Castile," "Crown Diamonds," "Oberon," "Trovatore," which was repeated at the Saturday matinee, and the "Bohemian Girl," which was given on Thursday and Saturday evenings. The present operatic season may not be considered a success. Niblo's is too far down town for opera. All of the operas were charmingly rendered, with the exception of "Oberon," which seemed to tax the abilities of the artists too severely. The "Bohemian Girl" may be chronicled as the success of the week, and it will be sung on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The present week will be the last of the opera season. We could wish for Miss Richings' sake that the present season throughout the country may prove successful, for she has labored hard and struggled against apparently overwhelming obstacles to establish English opera upon a substantial foundation in this country. The troupe will commence a brief season at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, Pa., on Nov. 4th, and on the same date, at Niblo's, Offenbach's last drama, entitled the "Rapparee," will be presented for the first time in this city.

THE LYDIA THOMPSON BURLESQUE TROUPE continued to attract large audiences at Wood's Museum during the past week. Miss Pauline Markham, in consequence of her late accident, was not able to appear during the week, and her character in the burlesque of "Carline" was assumed by Miss Rosa Cooke, who acted it to the satisfaction of the audiences. At the matinees during the week, save Saturday, Miss Rosa Cooke has appeared in an operatic drama entitled the "Rose of Castile." The present week will be the last opportunity to witness "Carline," as it will be withdrawn after Saturday, Nov. 12th, to give place, on the 14th, to a spectacular burlesque, which has been especially adapted to this troupe, entitled "Paris; or, the Apple of Discord," upon which occasion Miss Eliza Weathersby and Mr. Harry Becket will make their first appearance since rejoining this troupe. The "Rose of Castile" will be continued at the usual matinees. A new comic opera troupe, under the direction of Fred. Lyster, has been engaged by manager George Wood to perform at the matinees, and is underlined for an early appearance.

"WEE WILLIE WINKIE" may be said to be the leading success of the season. Notwithstanding the great political excitement which prevails, the Olympic Theatre has been well filled during the past week. George L. Fox, as the clown, continues to convulse the audiences with laughter by his artistic comic acting. The machinery runs smoothly, and entente cordiale among the players improves with each representation. Little Jennie Yeamans has completely turned the heads and confiscated the hearts of half the six year old beaux of the city. She is a charming child actress.

ARTEMUS WARD'S TRAVELS, a drama entitled "Duty, the Mariner's Compass" has been played during the entire week. It was well cast, carefully placed upon the stage and well acted throughout. It apparently gave satisfaction and attracted fair audiences. "The Game Cock of the Wilderness" formed the concluding portion of the programme each evening. Another new drama is announced for the present week, called "Fabian, the Serf; or, the Lover's Grotto," and is a translation from the French. The "Terrible Tinker" will be acted in conjunction with it.

STUART ROBSON, who, for the past six weeks, at Lina Edwin's Theatre, has given some excellent comic impersonations, closed his engagement there on Nov. 5th. He goes to Boston and will shortly appear at the Boston Theatre in his quaint portrayal of the character of Simon Tapperit, and if Miss Stuart is engaged to play Miggs, as she probably will be, we can assure the Hubites there is a rare comic treat in store for them. During the past week at this theatre Harry Beckett has appeared in the burlesque of "Aladdin," playing the Widow Twanky, and Stuart Robson has performed Capt. Crosstree in "Black Eyed Susan," Mr. Charles T. Parsloe and Miss Emma Cline withdrew from this theatre during the past week. Mr. M. W. Lemingwell, Miss Blanche Galton and Mr. Thos. Whiffin commence an engagement this evening, Nov. 7th, and Mr. Harry Beckett has been re-engaged for the present week, and will continue to appear in "Aladdin." Mr. Leffingwell will play Romeo Jaffier Jenkins, which he has made a specialty, having acted it some hundreds of times. Miss Galton and Mr. Whiffin will appear in the comic opera of the "Blind Beggars."

THE NINTH consecutive week of the representation of "Man and Wife" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, which will also be its last but one, commences this evening, Nov. 7th. Miss Clara Morris, who came to this city a perfect stranger and unheralded, by her excellent acting of the character of Anne Sylvester, has firmly established herself as a favorite, and conclusively demonstrated that she possesses histrionic powers of a high order. Mr. Pierce, who assumes one of the minor characters, is also deserving of commendation. The play is well acted throughout. "Fernande," a great success of last season, will speedily be produced. The business of the past week has fluctuated from full houses to indifferent ones.

MME. F. W. LEDER made her first appearance in this city after a two years absence, at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, on Oct. 31st, under the management of Charles Wheatleigh and J. H. Snyder. She appeared as Elizabeth during the week, except on Saturday night, when she acted Mrs. Haller in the "Stranger." The business of the week was bad. The present week will be the last of her engagement, and "Elizabeth" will be continued. The managers have displayed much judgment in presenting this lady during the political excitement.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS is in the flood tide of success; the auditorium is neat and clean, the best of order is preserved and the feats of the arena are well performed. Among the equestrians during the past week Robert Stickney was pre-eminent; he is very graceful, displays much courage and rides with skill; his three backward somersaults through three balloons, in the circuit of the ring, were rapturously applauded. Mr. Fillis, an English equestrian of note, made his first appearance in America on Monday evening, Oct. 31st. He is a graceful, dashing rider and performed his various feats with confidence. He is an acceptable addition to the equestrian corps of America. Mlle. Rollande performed some daring equestrian feats, using neither saddle or bridle. The clowns, Pentland and Conrad, kept the audience in a roar in the best of spirits with their comicalities. This week James Melville and his infant son will perform some of those daring acts which have rendered his name celebrated in both hemispheres. The band, under the leadership of C. Boswell, is deserving of especial mention; the selections of music are good and well performed. The Cyncophalus, with its activity, will be exhibited from England some days since, and, having gotten his sea legs on, is now daily rehearsing and will appear in some startling equestrian acts probably about Nov. 14th.

AT KELLY AND LEON'S MINSTRELS the present programme has hit the popular vein and full houses have been the rule during the past week; in fact, upon three evenings standing room only could be had. Mme. Seebach was present one evening during the week, and applauded Leon in his imitation of Nilsson. Very little change is needed, and the only variation offered in the programme for the present week will consist of an act entitled, "Who Died First?" in which S. S. Purdy and Dave Wilson will appear. Leon will sing "All Among the Hay," and Master Clarence Burton will perform a dwarf dance.

MISS ANNIE HINDLE, in her sensational songs and protean sketches; Lillie Wentworth, a clog dancer; Kate Sharpe, another comic vocalist, and a new local drama by John P. Poole, entitled the "Orphan Girl," are announced as the fresh attractions at Tony Pastor's Opera House for the present week. Johnny Wild, Frank Kerns, Nelse Seymour, James Cummings, Connor and Bradley and others remain. Tony Pastor will sing some new songs and Murray will give the "Echoes from Vaterland." The energy which characterizes the management of this house we are happy to state is meeting with a suitable reward. The performances are ever enjoyable and give great delight to the patrons of this theatre.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 643 Broadway, inserts his cards among the advertisements. He would like to hear from Sig. Bernard, and he attends to the business of the Fox and Denier Pantomime Troupe.

WITH PLEASURE we give place to the following card from the directress of the "Lina Edwin Theatre," and shall be only too glad to learn that her efforts to place that establishment on a firm foundation has been crowned with success:—

LINA EDWIN'S THEATRE, 720 BROADWAY.

FRANK QUEEN, ESQ.—DEAR SIR.—In your last issue of the CLIPPER it was stated that I had reduced the salaries of my company. The article generally has had a tendency to cast a doubt about my solvency or capability to run my theatre open. Your editor has not been truthfully informed of facts. The truth is, I had made certain engagements at an unusually high figure, and, feeling that advantage had been taken of my inexperience as a manager, I informed the principal members, only, that they should have to come down to the standard salaries for their several positions. The small salaried people were not asked, or obliged to submit to, any reduction. My place has been the scene of many failures, but I am laboring zealously to insure success, sparing neither pains nor expense to establish the theatre as a respectable first class vaudeville and burlesque theatre, and hope you will be kind enough to further my efforts. Respectfully yours, LINA EDWIN.

MR. W. W. FOWLER, agent of the Berger Family Swiss Bell Ringers, was in this city during the past week on a flying visit to his friends.

AT WALLACK'S THEATRE the performances of the entire past week have been devoted to the old comedies. On Monday, Oct. 31st, Coleman's comedy entitled "John Bull" was produced with the following excellent cast:—

Dennis Brulgruddery, Broucons	Mr. Peasymans
Job Thornberry	John Gilbert
Peregrine	Charles Fisher
Hon. Tom Shuffleton	O. Marlowe
Dan	J. C. Williamson
Frank Rochdale	Chas. Rockwell
Sir Simon Rochdale	M. Lanegan
John Bull	E. M. Holland
W. J. Leonard
J. Peck
Quigley
Miss Fisher
Mrs. Thomas Barry
Mrs. Brulgruddery
Mrs. John Sefton
Mary Thornberry	Miss H. Tracy

The comedy is very old fashioned, the incidents most improbable and the language at times is stilted. In the hands of an ordinary

Fletcher in the leading parts. Gen. Joseph Darr is the manager and M. V. Langham, stage manager.

KATIE EMELLE'S DRAMATIC TROUPE performed three nights in Minersville, Pa., commencing Nov. 2d.

A COMEDIAN, juvenile man and a violinist or leader are wanted for Albert W. Aiken's company. See advertisement.

MARION TAYLOR, burlesque actress and comedienne, advertises that she can be engaged.

THE VARIED ENTERTAINMENTS provided nightly at Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., are as popular as ever, as is evidenced by a constant succession of crowded houses. Mr. G. W. Jester, the "Man with the Talking Hand," was the great attraction during the past week, and his wonderful powers of mimicry and ventriloquism amused and astonished the audiences nightly present, and were deservedly greeted with much applause. Robert Butler, the popular pantomimist, made his re-appearance on the 31st ult., appearing in the farce of "Dodging for a Wife" and the pantomime of "Robert Macaire," in which he was exceedingly successful. Jacques Strop, Dick Sands appeared in his clog and pedestal dances, and, in conjunction with John Feely, gave the sensation song and dance, "Let Me Be." Mr. George W. Smith produced a new ballet, entitled "Nymphs of the Wood," in which the fine ballet corps, led by Mlle De Rees, are seen to much advantage in picturesque groupings and incidental dances. John Mulligan and Bob Harrison are irresistibly funny as the Gens. d'Armes in "Genevieve de Brabant." The present is announced as the last week of Mr. G. W. Jester. On the 7th inst. the "Four Blondes" will make their re-appearance in a new Can-can; the Camara Sisters, Turkish danseuses, and Pedanto, the gymnast, will also put in an appearance and will act in addition to the already strong company. The evening's entertainment will conclude with the drama of "Valentine and Orson."

OF DRAMATIC AFFAIRS IN BOSTON we are advised as follows by our correspondent, under date of Nov. 5th:—"'Monte Cristo,' which has enjoyed a prosperous run of eight weeks at the Globe, will, after to-day, be seen no more. This afternoon is its forty-eighth and last performance. 'Henry Dunbar' receives its third performance to-night, and on Monday evening next, 7th, 'Hamlet' will receive its first representation, with a mounting surpassing any former attempts of the kind in our city. The principal roles will be cast as follows:—Hamlet, Chas. Fechter; Ghost, J. W. Wallack; Laertes, C. H. Vandenhoff; Polonius, W. J. Le Moyne; Claudius, H. F. Daly; Horatio, Frank Roche; first Gravedigger, Chas. Le Clercq; second Gravedigger, H. Meimer; first Actor, Geo. Clarke; Ophelia, Charlotta Le Clercq, alternating with Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau; Queen, Mrs. Melinda Jones....The Museum has given us a treat in the shape of the 'Two Roses,' which is as charming a comedy as we have had in a long time. The plot is, to be sure, hardly striking or very original, still there is a freshness and a crispness about its development that pleases by force. Annie Clarke's rendering of the charming Louise was a delicious; Laura Phillips made a very good Ida, and the two played together capitally. William Warren, as Digby Grant, played the character to the life. Chas. Barron was all that could be desired as Jack Wyatt, and J. H. Ring played Our Mr. Jenkins with a great deal of genuine humor; Harry Crisp acted the blind Caleb Deecie splendidly; Frank Hardenbergh assumed the role of the eccentric Mr. Furnival and gave it a prominent position, while Mrs. Vincent was very good as Mrs. Jenkins. The play was mounted in the Museum's best style, and the scene in the last act of Vassalwick Grange, with the sparkling waters of the fountain playing merrily, the rich meadows running way into the background and the handsome house on the left, was particularly good. If the 'Two Roses' does not have a long run it will not be because of the lack of merit." "Fernande" is announced as in rehearsal, and "M. P.'s" is in preparation....Lotta has been playing the 'Ticket-of-Leave Man' all this week at the Boston Theatre, and as this is the first time she has presented it in this city, there was some curiosity to see how she would play Sam Willoughby. It is needless to say it was a success financially, if not artistically. By the introduction of innumerable banjo solos, songs and dances, the effect of Sam Willoughby is very much like the effect of the Marchioness, or Fire Fly, or any other of her roles, but she looks pretty in boy's clothing, and makes a hit, and that's all that is necessary, I suppose. Her support has been very good, Neil Warner, who made his first appearance of the season, playing Bob Brierly very finely, and Leslie Allen making a most decided success in both make-up and acting as Melter Moss. The rest of the cast was entirely satisfactory, and, altogether, the play formed an agreeable entertainment. Next (this) week is Lotta's last, and on Monday and Tuesday evenings she will give the 'Little Detective;' on Wednesday and Thursday, 'Heart's Ease;' on Friday, for her benefit, 'Andy Blake' and the 'Young Lieutenant,' and on Saturday repeat the benefit bill. After her, that is on the 14th, Mrs. D. P. Bowers will begin a three weeks' engagement, and when that is finished, Stuart Robson, the low comedian of this theatre, will have an especial opening, appearing as Simon Tappertit in 'Barnaby Rudge,' while his sister, Mary Stuart, will play Miss Miggs—the part she was so successful in in New York.....Messrs. Mafitt and Tyler opened the Adelphi on Monday evening, 31st ult., as a variety establishment, and judging from the first success, the season should prove profitable. But it is unsafe to make such prophecies, for the house at the opening of the Worrell Sisters was as large as any I ever saw inside of the Adelphi, while at their benefit at the close of their season there was hardly a couple of hundred people in the house. To be successful managers must deserve success; for we have as many theatres going now as can well carry mail, and new attempts must be better than those we have now, or else go to the wall. However, the attractions for the week have been very good indeed. They opened with the comic pantomime 'Nick Nax,' rendered by the child pantomimists, who are real wonders in their way, and who go through the various tricks of the pantomime every bit as nicely as their elders. After that, James Speight, a youthful violinist, gave an exhibition of skill most remarkable for one of his age; and the 'Sled Race,' led by Mons. Ajax, from Fisk's Opera House, N. Y., then danced a new piece called 'Terpsichore and Ærostatique,' after which Louise Bartine gave a song and dance called 'Sal from Boston.' The remarkable Kiralfy Troupe then gave an Hungarian ballet, after which Mastit and Bartholomew danced a wooden-shoe dance. Harry Jackson followed in a sketch called the 'Mad Actor,' in which he gave some very good imitations of celebrated actors—Fechter, Couldock, Kean, etc., and the Kiralfy Troupe gave another of their capital ballets. Chas. Ravel then danced a stilt dance, and the entertainment concluded with the farce of 'The Two Heroes,' with Mastit and Bartholomew in a couple of amusing characters. Next (this) week, the burlesque of 'Hamlet' will be given.....The bill at the Howard Athenæum for this week has opened with the gymnastic exercises by the Royal Satsuma Japanese Troupe, occupying about an hour. The Irish songs by Joe Murphy; Dutch sketch, 'Troubles of Schneider,' by D. L. Morris; clog hornpipe, by Jennie Benson; Ethiopian sketch, 'Mutton Trial,' song and dance, Ashcroft and Morton; ballet by Emily Rizi and her corps de ballet; 'Gems of Erin,' by Jennie Benson; the whole concluding with 'Life on the Mississippi,' in which Add Weaver, Joe Murphy, Billy Ashcroft and J. W. Morton appear.....Mrs. Scott Siddons read 'Midsummer Night's Dream' on Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st, in Music Hall, before a tremendous audience, and her charming delivery was thoroughly enjoyed. Nobody, I imagine, claims for her any great genius, but it cannot be denied that she is extremely pleasing. Strange to say, her reading of the scenes wherein the hard-handed men of Athens appear were the best, and she seemed to seize upon the humor in its true meaning and succeeded in placing the scenes most vividly before her audience. As a reader Mrs. Scott Siddons is far more successful than as an actress, I think. She was accompanied by the sweet music of Mendelssohn, rendered by a select orchestra under the direction of Mr. B. J. Lang.....Frank Chanfrau has been in the city during the week, stopping at the St. James."

OF AFFAIRS THEATRICAL IN SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., our correspondent, "Sir Toby," writing on Oct. 30th, presents the following review:—"The Metropolitan Theatre, which so frequently is in a state of untenanted gloom, had its lamps all in ablaze on Friday evening, Oct. 28th, when Boucicault's new play of 'The Rapparee' was enacted for the first time in America. The production is due to Miss Sallie Hinckley, who purchased the play from Charles Wheatley, and with a generosity that is foreign to what we thought, the sole right of playing it on the Pacific coast. It must have surprised her, indeed, to see it underlined at the California, when busy preparation was going on at her own theatre for the production of the drama then announced for Oct. 29th. It is not at all likely that Miss Hinckley would deliberately run opposition to so formidable a rival in a theatre for a basis which is more often found closed than open. Why, at the best, no talent is available that would amount to anything in comparison. It was deemed too late to withdraw, so every nerve was set for the early bringing out of the piece, stimulated by the hope that, by anticipating the California's production, full swing would be held while the field remained clear; but in this disappointment awaited the Metropolitan people, for the theatre was full on the first night. Inadequate rehearsal and want of sympathy between the actors occasioned some disagreeable contretemps, and the acting being of an ordinary sort, the play was received coldly. There was a show of applause for the two sensational scenes, the burning of the castle belonging to Roderick O'Malley at the end of the second act, and the submerging of a cavern by the sea at the conclusion of the first act; but from the way these scenes were managed the effect was not intensely surprising. The leading character, Roderick O'Malley (the Rapparee), was personated by Geo. W. Thompson, who proved beyond doubt soundness of lung, and that he could not be said of his interpretation of lines forming his part. This O'Malley has an attachment tinted with romance for a beautiful woman, but that did not avail her from being addressed by him in a voice admirably suited to the haranguing of his fierce Rapparees, bristling with pikes and blades of scythes. Miss Hinckley did her best to infuse a little natural acting in the representation, but the character as from Grace O'Hara is too intense for her talent, which finds better expression in lines less melo-dramatic. Her toilettes were elegant. As a matter of record the full cast is appended:—Lord President O'Hara, R. H. Cox; Pontes Duquesne, Milton Nobles; Shotto Vesey, Pierpont Thayer; Cow Doctor, George Hinckley; Conner Kee, W. H. Hamilton; Costegan, C. A. Mestayer; Monkcheesy, J. King; Trooper, Chas. Fay; Sailor, C. Ankus; Patrice, Miss Maggie Moore. 'The Rapparee' is announced till further notice. .....The Irish drama has been given this week at the California Theatre with marvelous success—from a box office point of view. Its exponent has been Mr. Dan Bryant, who made his first appearance here in three years, Oct. 17th, in 'Handy Andy' and 'Danny the Baron.' These plays also introduced a person named Miss Little Mac, who, the bill boards tell, is a dwarf in stature, a giant in talent. This diminutive individual, so odd in appearance, whose performances are the very essence of the grotesque, has convulsed crowded audiences till it could hardly be said the dignity for which Americans at the theatre are proverbial was rigidly observed. As a stimulus to applause the outshone his patron, Dan Bryant. Critically, of course, no comparison would be instituted. Little Mac is curious, amusing and, to this city, novel; and anything novel is the unceasing clamor of ordinary theatre-goers. Bryant, no doubt, appears at his best as Handy Andy; he has always shown a predilection for the character, and it would not be unfair to rate him as a Hibernian actor, looking at him through that part. We found him natural, not given to seek effect by questionable means, and possessed of a pair of lively heels. As a singer he proved moderate, and his brogue, though having a spice of the true Stuff, is not rich—not luscious or mellow. His performance left the impression as the work of a sensible but merely clever delineator. This opinion was not modified when 'Born to Good Luck' took the place of 'Handy Andy,' Bryant has had another week of fine houses at the California Theatre, and his engagement has been prolonged that he may give strength to the cast of the 'Rapparee.' 'Rory O'Moore' and the 'Irish Lion,' with Bryant, Little Mac, Raymond, Niland, Walton and Rose Shewell, were rattled off to crowded houses 24th and 26th. One of the features of 'Rory O'Moore' was a surprisingly good make-up for an old miser by Leathes, a young English actor. The company often renders plays at this theatre in unexceptional style; there are few plays it renders better than the 'Colleen Bawn,' which was given the nights following. Last night 'The Rapparee,' procured direct from Boucicault, drew something like $1,500. It was impossible to arrive at a correct judgement of the play, as seen at the Metropolitan, but here it is seen at its best; it is cast with more than ordinary strength, and set with scenery for the most part appropriate, although not all freshly painted. It is a romantic military drama of the red coat and blue fire school. The action covers three short acts, and a striking peculiarity is that it all transpires in the night time. This envelopes it with an atmosphere of romantic gloom. Its tint is lurid and almost supernatural. We have a sea eaten cavern, green in slime and seaweed, the rendezvous of the Rapparees, a grim castle where, above the howling of the wind, is heard the voice of a woman, whose wail for her lover, threatened with death by violence, strikes terror to the heart of the warder, who hears in it the awful warning of the weird Banshee. Presently, the castle is in flames, a horrible revenge at the cost of self-immolation, which the Rapparee endeavors to wreak upon his enemies, but discovering his affianced to be in the consuming structure, by desperate despair forces his way so as to be able to gain a secret staircase, by which he escapes and rescues her whom he loves. Those that would follow in pursuit are driven back by volumes of fire pouring through the passages. We have a scene between the lovers in a dungeon with a link over them mistily burning, the scaling of a castle, and the ultimate destruction of the villain, with a blade through his heart, thrust by the Rapparee, by the light of a stray beam from the silver moon. Of its kind it is an interesting play, but is no more to be compared to the 'Colleen Bawn' or 'Arrah-Na-Pogue,' than is Miss Braddon to Thackeray. The 'fire scene' is its grand attraction, and evidently the people of the California thought so, for a biase was made of such proportions, that nervous persons in the audience has fears lest the flames should communicate to the theatre. John McCullough as the Rapparee, perhaps, made as much of the character as could be reasonably expected. He was chivalrous in bearing, intense in feeling, and manly in every respect. Miss May Howard ably seconded him as Grace O'Hara, revealing much power of not too demonstrative, but impressive order. Without particularizing at this writing, the merits in detail of a well sustained performance, the cast is found annexed:—Pontes Duquesne, Henry Edwards; Gen. Genckie, W. A. Mestayer; Col. O'Hara, Sedley Smith; Ulick McMurrah, James Carden; Conner Roe, E. J. Buckley; Montcheesny, George French; Sohtto Vesey, A. E. Leathes; Patrice, Miss Minnie Walton; Cow Doctor, Dan Bryant. 'Monte Cristo' is being prepared for the holidays in a style of magnificence never equalled here. It will be produced with a ballet which will be probably led by Mlle. Bonfanti.....The only novelty this week at the Alhambra was the appearance of Burke, the drillist. .....Robert Nelson, the wonderful gymnast, and his two infantile sons, marvels in the trade of tumbling, are delighting audiences at the Bella Union.....Miss Minnie Walton, who has filled minor parts at the Philadelphia Theatre with much success for over a year, and who is probably the most beautiful and promising girl on the California stage, goes to New York for a short time under engagement to Alex. Henderson, for an opera bouffe troupe he is now forming."

THE FOX AND DENIER PANTOMIME TROUPE commences a brief engagement at the Opera House, Columbus, O., Nov. 7th.

ALBERT AIKEN was the star at the Opera House, Louisville, Ky., during the past week. The "Witches of New York" was played up to Friday, when the "Ace of Spades" was given on Friday and Saturday evenings.

THE BERGER FAMILY of Swiss Bell Ringers are advertised to appear in Pleasantville, Pa., Nov. 7th and 8th; Petroleum Centre, 9th and 10th; Rouseville, 11th and 12th, and Oil City, 14th and 15th. This troupe some time during the summer was engaged by Mr. Howe, a newsdealer in Titusville, Pa., to give three concerts on Nov. 3d, 4th and 5th. It appears that considerable rivalry exists between Mr. Howe and Mr. Hurd, of that town, a bookseller and agent of the hall, with regard to the selling of reserved seats. The hall was booked by Mr. Hurd for the Berger family, and on Oct. 24th Mr. Howe paid Mr. Hurd $25 to apply on the rent of the hall for the above dates, and took a receipt to that effect. The agent of the company, Mr. W. W. Fowler, arrived in due season to bill the town, and the tickets were to have been placed on sale at Mr. Howe's news room; whereupon Mr. Hurd notified Mr. Fowler that the hall had not been rented to the company and they could not have it. Mr. Fowler called upon Mr. Hurd and represented that Mr. Howe had been acting as the company's agent, had contracted for the hall and paid a portion of the rent. He was told this made no difference whatever; the company could not have the hall unless Howe would sign Hurd's printed contract for the sale of reserved seats at Hurd's store and turn over all the tickets. The printed contract referred to, and which was not presented to Mr. Howe when he engaged the hall, stipulates that the proprietor of the hall reserves four private seats, that all numbered reserved seats must be sold in the book store of B. N. Hurd, and that the proprietor of the hall reserves the right to sell tickets at the box office at a fair compensation. This course of procedure is very unusual, and we cannot see by what right any hall proprietor can elect himself the treasurer of the companies that play in his hall and handle their money. We opine, if this course is to be continued, that traveling companies will pass by Titusville hereafter.

THE ANVIL CHORUS, with hammers and anvils, was recently played at Bangor, Me. At the concert a small piece of steel broke from one of the new hammers used in beating the accompaniment, and flew out into the audience, striking a lady who sat near the stage just under the eye, producing a painful wound. Had the piece struck an inch higher it would have injured and very likely destroyed the eye itself.

"SHE'S AS LOVELY AS A FAIRY," song and dance, dedicated to Miss Annie Wood, is one of the latest publications from the press of L. J. Cramer, 254 Bowery. The words are by George Cooper and the music by Charles E. Pratt, the whole forming a very pleasing addition to the song and dance class of entertainment.

THOS. WHIFFIN and Blanche Galton, tenor and contralto, can be engaged. Their address is in another column.

SIGNOR P. BRIGNOLI was married to Miss Isabella McCulloch on Thursday, July 14th, at St. Paul's church, of Scotland, Montreal, Canada, by the Rev. J. M. Jenkins, D. D. This will set at rest the various rumors which have been in circulation with regard to these parties.

THE SONG AND DANCE, "She's as Lovely as a Fairy," can be had of L. J. Cramer, whose card is in another column.

ADELAIDE PHILLIPS gave a concert in Allyn Hall, Hartford, Conn., on Oct. 31st.

NILSON had a good house in Brooklyn Nov. 2d. There was some "paper" out, but not much. The Brooklyn Academy ticket business is pretty shrewdly managed. Now that curiosity has been gratified no more big figures will be realized in the way of $4 seats to hear Nilsson in Brooklyn.

THE ARTICLE IN OUR PAST ISSUE referring to the suit brought by the Mercantile Library Association against Mr. C. D. Hess was copied from the Pittsburgh Pa., papers. The correspondent in that city informs us that we would have been correct in many respects. "Mr. Hess did not skulk away, but was at the depot in Pittsburgh fully half an hour before the train started east, superintending preparations for the departure of the company, and could easily have been found by the sheriff had he wanted him badly."

THE MENDELSSOHN QUINTETTE CLUB gave two concerts in Mercantile Library Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 3d and 4th.

Variety Halls.

FANNY ARCHER, vocalist and actress, is requested through an advertisement to send her address to Wm. E. Sinn.

AT THEATRE COMIQUE, Cleveland, Ohio, besides the regular company, Manager Montpelier odors a perfect avalanche of attractions, consisting of Edwin Blanchard and his dog Carlo; Emma Marsh, an old time favorite here; Annie Harrison, May Henning, Emma Dormer and Emma Whitney.

LADY VOCALISTS are wanted for Valer's Winter Garden, Philadelphia, Pa. See advertisement.

SIDNEY FRANKS, vocalist, opens at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Nov. 7th.

EMMA ALFORD, character vocalist, opens at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Nov. 7th, and joins J. E. McDonough's troupe on Dec. 5th.

ACTON E. KELLY, Hibernian burlesque orator and Irish comedian, advertises that he is prepared to negotiate with managers for the production of a new burlesque.

JOHNNY SMITH, of the Academy of Music, Nashville, Tenn., was recently presented with a handsome banjo by A. Gaffeny and Wm. Carroll, of Stowe's Circus.

WAITE AND COLE'S VARIETY COMBINATION are traveling by their own steamer up the White river. They exhibited at Clarendon, Ark., on Oct. 31st.

THE KIRALFY BALLET TROUPE exhibited in Waverly, O., Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st; Portsmouth, O., 2d and 3d; Maysville, Ky., 4th and 5th; Maggie Willett, comic; Carleton, Dutch song and dance, and Bryan and Emett, harp and violin solo, are with this troupe.

DAN SHELBY has bought out Fred. Thompson's interest in the Exchange Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., and is now the sole proprietor. Carrie Lang and Ione Lang have been the chief attraction during the past week. Malinda Fargie, Belle St. Leon, Agnes Robinson, H. W. Eagan and George L. Hall still remain. Dan Shelby has appeared in his great act called "Pompey Wizout ze Handle."

RINALDO, the gymnast, has been the chief attraction at the Metropolitan, Indianapolis, Ind., during the past week. Oscar Willis and the Barlow Brothers have appeared in a "Congo Coco Dance;" Augusta Lameraux, Bobby McKoun, E. D. Gooding, Mary Melville and Kate St. Leon, have appeared in their various special acts. For Nov. 7th William Carleton, Irish comic; Tommy Winnett, and Lunt, female gymnast, are announced.

PERFORMERS desiring engagements are requested to address Fred. Alma, Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa., as per advertisement.

AT THE FRONT STREET THEATRE COMIQUE, Baltimore, on Monday, Oct. 31st, the European novelties of Mr. Samuel Colville, viz.:—Mona, D'Atalie, the man with the iron jaw; Mlle. Angela, the female Samson, and their child, Little Zephyr, opened an engagement of twelve nights. The crowning feat, and which elicited the wildest enthusiasm, was that of Mlle. Angela drawing up Mons. D'Atalie to the dome of the theatre, holding young Zephyr only by his teeth. Next to Dr. Windship, who exhibited here several years ago, this couple must be considered the strongest known to fame. D'Atalie, however, is superior to the doctor in his great barrel feat. The other portion of the entertainment at the Front is about the same as noticed in my last report. So writes our correspondent "Don Juan."

MONS. D'ATALIE, the "man of steel," Mlle. Angela, the "female Samson," and Young Zephyr, of Colville's European novelties, now performing at the Front Street Theatre Comique, will open at Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., for two weeks on Nov. 14th, after which they have open time till Dec. 19th, when they commence an engagement in Pittsburgh, Pa., for two weeks.

AT THE VARIOUS VARIETY HALLS in Memphis, Tenn., there has been no novelty the past week.

COL. GOSHEN, the Arab giant, commences an engagement at the Metropolitan, Washington, D. C., on Nov. 7th. He will play Cousin Joe.

CHARLEY SHAY'S MONSTER QUINCUPLEXAL EXPOSITION is billed to appear in Tweddle Hall, Albany, N. Y., Nov. 11th and 12th.

OF THE VARIETY HALLS in Vicksburg, Miss., our correspondent, writing Nov. 1st, furnishes the following information:—"At Freeman's Opera House Walter Bray has made a hit. Eph Horn, Jr., and Sam Cole, the two negro comedians, appeared for the first time in this city Oct. 31st. They met with an enthusiastic reception. Sprague and Mack have also opened an engagement at this house. Miss Lula Callum sweetly sings 'Kiss Me, Mother, Ere I Die.'.....At Trottman's Varieties and Wheeler's Academy of Music business is only fair. Billy Pash, negro delineator, appeared at the latter place last night."

PETE LEE'S FEMALE MINSTRELS was the principal attraction at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., for the week ending Nov. 5th, Lee being in his element on the end. The Brunelle Sisters have become favorites. Dan Morris, Irish comedian, closes his engagement at this place on the 9th inst., on which date he has a benefit. He commences an engagement at the Adelphi, Boston, on the 14th inst. Mr. M. will meet with a cordial reception, should he ever return here. So writes our correspondent "Frank."

SEVERAL ARTISTS are wanted by Charley Long, who can be addressed care of this office.

THE ATTENDANCE at Weston's Opera House, Buffalo, N. Y., under the new management has perceptibly increased. Billy Allen received a substantial farewell benefit on Nov. 3d. He will shortly join the Oates' Burlesque Troupe.

OF VARIETY DOINGS in Cincinnati our correspondent writes on the 8th:—"All of the halls have felt the presence of the Fox and Denier and Billy Emerson parties, the latter having been very light. There have been several changes at the Winter Garden. Maud de Lisle has not been playing this week, and Nellie Rosedale has having fully recovered from her indisposition. Lew Brimmer, backfist, and Miss Annie Brimmer, jig dancer, joined last night (Thursday), and are well received. Harrigan, Rickey and Tony Hart have a ludicrous act on the programme, entitled 'The Bismarckonians,' introducing the air of the 'Gens d'arms Duet.' The two former close their engagement this week, and will leave for New York Sunday night, where they will probably open at Butler's. While they may be excelled in their acting and dancing, there is not a more original couple in the business, and Harrigan is a capital end man. Ned Reed will probably be engaged with Lew Brimmer to replace them.....At the Alhambra there have been several changes. Annie Florence, the dashing 'Frailty' in the Can-Can, has retired for a rest, and has been replaced in the role by Carrie Austin, who sings very good duets with spirit. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf, snake charmers, have joined the company. They twine venomous, but rather sleepy looking reptiles about themselves by the armfull. Miss Nellie Zegrino, a very good vocalist, and Sig. Zegrino, a very daring trapezist, have also joined. He does the 'flying leap' in excellent style. Marsh Adams, in his new line of comic, biz., takes immensely. Neal Conway, the active clogger, take a benefit here next Thursday. Art Holmon continues to be a leading attraction in his female acts. La Rainford ran off yesterday, without notice.....The Race Street Theatre continues the even tenor of its way with an unchanged company, though there has been an important change to two of the troupe, Mr. Hen Mason and Miss Celia Ifert having been joined in wedlock during the past week to form a very efficient specialty company. They are doing well. This event shows that the gentleman was no stone Mason, and now he is no longer a free Mason. Whether the Masonic fraternity is to have any new members remains with time and the tied to disclose. In the meantime requiescat in pace.....The very select company at the Academy of Music, on Sixth street, at present consists of Tim Woodruff, interlocutor; Johnny Nelson and Johnny Pike, end men; Master Willie, song and dance boy."

A VERY STRONG COMBINATION of talent has appeared at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., and the house has been scarcely large enough to accommodate the "rush" to see the show. There has been more money taken into the treasury of this establishment this week than ever before in the same length of time. Perhaps no variety show in the country is offering a more varied and enjoyable programme than has recently been presented at this house. I subjoin a part of Thursday evening's bill of fare as a specimen:—Skating Act, Carrie Augusta Moore; Musical Melange, J. D. Kelly; "The Boatman's Delight," Clinetop Sisters and Mlle. Alexandria; Duet, Nelson Sisters; "Who Stole Dutchey's Dog?" Charley Gardner, Billy Hart, Geo. Sherman, Harry Stanwood, etc.; Song and Dance, Delehanty and Hengler (encored until the artists were exhausted); Gymnastic Performance, C. A. Sherman; Slipping Rope Dance, Clinetop Sisters; Ethiopian Humor, Cool Burgess; "Man and Wife," Nelson Sisters; Song and Dance, Harry Bloodgood; Banjo Solo, Harry Stanwood; Pedestal Statue Dances, Jimmy and Willie Daly; "Catastrophe," Harry Bloodgood, Cool Burgess, George Herman, etc.; Polka Mazourka, Clinetop Sisters and Mlle. Alexandria; French Quadrille, a la Obdoche, Delehanty, Hengler, Willie and Jimmy Daly, Pipery, Peggy Podge," Cool Burgess, Billy Hart and Miss Nelson Freeman. With the exception of the farces all the above acts were encored, some of them repeatedly. A number of new people will put in an appearance next week. So writes our correspondent.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., is doing a big business. The company during last week was very strong. On Friday, Miss Annie Pixley, the clever and charming vocalist of the place, was the recipient of a benefit from her numerous friends. The house was packed and applause after applause greeted her. Harry Clark and Mlle. Gracie did the Niagara Leap and were loudly cheered upon every appearance. So writes our correspondent, C. R. F.

OF AMUSEMENTS IN ST. LOUIS, Mo., our correspondent "Agra," writing on Nov. 4th, says:—"At the Olympic Theatre the event of the week has been the appearance of the Gaite Comique Group of Specialties, under the management of Spalding, Bidwell and McDonough. It is composed of talent in all branches of the business—burlesque artists, pantomimists, dramatic, variety, negro performers, gymnasts, etc., the whole presenting a bill so diversified as to satisfy the tastes of all classes. A full house was in attendance on the opening night, Monday, the 31st ult., and the company received an enthusiastic welcome, making a very favorable impression both individually and collectively. The performance commenced with the farce called 'Two Can Play at One Game,' with Miss Minnie Jackson, Mr. A. B. Kennelly and Mr. S. Collins. After the farce Marie Zoel gave a pretty song and dance, receiving five encores. She was followed by Mlle. Rosa in 'La Sylphide;' next came Mr. Acton E. Kelly, the 'Irish Orator,' in a regular Irish stump speech, which is certainly a novel if not an original idea. His make-up was very characteristic, and the inimitable manner in which he delivered his witticisms, local hits, &c., caused shouts of laughter. The Kiralfy Sisters next gave a 'Hungarian dance,' receiving an encore, after which Billy Carter appeared in banjo solos and songs, and was received with rapturous applause. Mr. Geo. Leopold and Mr. Austin next gave some very interesting feats of strength and agility on the horizontal bar. Miss Ella Wesner then appeared in her protean changes and character swell songs. This lady is very stylish and artistic in her make up, and her changes are effected with rapidity. This was followed by a double clog by Messrs. Cooper and Fields, and Tooley in a Dutch song and dance. After this Mr. Frank Gibbons executed some thrilling feats upon the swinging trapeze and Elise Scott danced a fling. A burlesque ballet, arranged by Mons. Blandowski, entitled 'Aventures des Grisettes,' came next, introducing Miles. Antonino, Catani, Boshell and the Kiralfy Sisters. Mr. Geo. and Mlle. Blanch Leopold then appeared in a double act, which, taken as a whole, was very good indeed

COMPLIMENTARY.

The following very complimentary letter was written by Mr. Gayler to Mr. Barnes, and left upon the desk in the manager's private office, Saturday evening:—

ALBANY, Oct. 22, 1870.

LUCIEN BARNES, Esq.,
Manager Trimble Opera House, Albany, N. Y.

DEAR SIR.—At the close of the brilliant and successful engagement of Mr. Joseph K. Emmett, at your really beautiful theatre, I consider it due to express my entire satisfaction with the manner in which my drama ("Fritz, Our Cousin German") was placed upon the stage, as regards the scenery, properties and appointments, and also with the careful and creditable manner in which your excellent company performed the parts allotted to them.

The orchestra, which is a very fine one, under the able direction of Signor Fariatil, left nothing to be desired in that department, while the system and business-like promptness which characterised the front of the house and the box office, tended to render our relations in every respect pleasant and satisfactory.

Permit me to congratulate you upon the possession of so elegant and well regulated an establishment, and to express the sincere wish that your energy, enterprise and liberal management may command the success you so eminently deserve.

Yours very truly, CHARLES GAYLER.

People wishing to make money in the theatrical business in Albany will address for terms and time, LUCIEN BARNES,
Manager Trimble Opera House, or
COL. T. A. BROWN, 645 Broadway, New York.

THE NEW AND HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL STRAND BURLESQUE,
THE IDLE 'PRENTICE; OR, HIGH, LOW, JACK AND HIS LITTLE GAME!
Written by H. B. FARNIE. The Music by FRANK MUSGRAVE.
Provincial managers are requested to observe that this is the only burlesque on the subject of "Jack Sheppard" licensed by the Lord Chamberlain, and are hereby cautioned against infringement. Title, scenes and effects registered.
"The Times," in noticing the production of "THE IDLE 'PRENTICE," at the Strand Theatre, observes:—"Produced one continued shout of laughter and applause. * * * It is endowed with qualities which plainly distinguish it from most works of the kind. * * * There is novelty in the ring of Mr. Farnie's puns, brilliancy in all the characters, and liveliness in the music of Mr. Musgrave. * * * * "THE IDLE 'PRENTICE" will prove one of the great successes of the Strand.
The sole American right of this burlesque is vested in MR. JOHN E. McDONOUGH, Philadelphia, Pa. 29-tf
